

7-31-1996

About the Contributors

Journal of Book of Mormon Studies

Follow this and additional works at: <http://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/jbms>

BYU ScholarsArchive Citation

Studies, Journal of Book of Mormon (1996) "About the Contributors," Journal of Book of Mormon Studies: Vol. 5: No. 2, Article 10.
Available at: <http://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/jbms/vol5/iss2/10>

This End Matter is brought to you for free and open access by the All Journals at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in Journal of Book of Mormon Studies by an authorized administrator of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact scholarsarchive@byu.edu.

About the Contributors

Ken Haubrock has a B.A. degree in English from Brigham Young University. He is working as a Software Quality Assurance manager with Capital One Financial Services in Richmond, Virginia.

Massimo Introvigne, a law and philosophy graduate, is the director of the Center for Studies on New Religions (CESNUR) in Turin, Italy, and a part-time professor of religious studies in the Faculty of Theology of Pontifical Athenaeum Regina Apostolorum in Rome.

Noel B. Reynolds has a Ph.D. in Government from Harvard University. He is a professor of Political Science at Brigham Young University and currently serves as president of the Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS).

Stephen D. Ricks has a Ph.D. in Near Eastern Religions from the University of California at Berkeley and Graduate Theological Union. He is a professor of Hebrew and Semitic Languages at Brigham Young University.

David E. Sloan has an MBA and a J.D. from the University of Utah. He is a tax and estate-planning attorney at the law firm of Van Cott, Bagley in Salt Lake City.

Robert F. Smith, who formerly had research grants from FARMS, continues his endeavors in the southern California area.

Brian D. Stubbs has an M.A. in linguistics and is an instructor at the College of Eastern Utah-San Juan Campus.

John A. Tvedtnes, who earned an M.A. in linguistics and an M.A. in Middle East studies (Hebrew), is senior project manager with the Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies.

About the Contributors

Ken Hensley has a B.A. degree in English from Brigham Young University. He is writing as a Senior Oquirrhin Assistant manager with Capital One Financial Services in Midvale, Utah.

Maximo Intero, a law and philosophy graduate, is the director of the Center for Studies on New Religions (CSNR) in Tempe, Arizona, and a part-time professor of religious studies in the Faculty of Theology of Pontifical Salesian University in Turin, Italy.

Scott E. Reynolds has a Ph.D. in Government from Harvard University. He is a professor of Political Science at Brigham Young University and currently serves as president of the Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (FARMS).

Stephen D. Ricks has a Ph.D. in Near Eastern Languages from the University of California at Berkeley and Ordained Theological Union. He is a professor of Hebrew and Jewish Languages at Brigham Young University.

David E. Stone has an MBA and a Ph.D. from the University of Utah. He is a tax and estate planning attorney in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Robert F. Young has a Ph.D. in Near Eastern Languages from the University of California at Berkeley and Ordained Theological Union.

Richard D. Young has an M.A. in Hebrew and is an instructor at the College of Eastern Utah State Normal Campus.