CONTRIBUTORS

Ha Ryn Ahn is from Long Beach, California. She studied French at Fullerton Community College and writes in her spare time.

Merril Asp hails from Carson City, Nevada. He is in his last year of studying Physics at BYU and can be found late at night reading short story anthologies or treatises on vector calculus.

Allison Maeser Brimley is a Utah native pursuing an MFA in Creative Writing from Brigham Young University. She has been previously published in Inscape. She enjoys daily physical exercise of many kinds and never cooks the same thing twice.

Hunter Buxton began writing poetry and short stories when he was twelve. His goal is to create ideas in words which are stronger on paper than they appear in life, highlighting what is original and unique to each person, and thus to contrast with a society where the value of the individual is often marginalized.

Joanna Ellsworth holds a Bachelor's degree in English Education with a minor in Creative Writing. She teaches high school English language arts and creative writing and is currently an MFA candidate at BYU studying Creative Writing with an emphasis in poetry. She's a wife, a mom, a fitness enthusiast, a gamer, a geek—everything that strains the fabric of language until it warps to fit her shape.

Sarah Farrar saw the light and switched to English after attempting to be an engineer for two years. Her husband, Kraig, keeps her grounded and is her current proofreader. When she grows up, she hopes to live in a house with counter space and have a dog or two.

Claire Gillett is a Graphic Design student at BYU who is constantly looking for ways to combine her love of art with her great admiration for the written word. While her preference lies with creative nonfiction, she also experiments with poetry and literary criticism. In the fall of 2015, she was the first place winner of the Writing 150 opinion editorial contest. Her winning submission, “Mom . . . I Think I’m a Socialist,” recently appeared in the new edition of Mindful Writing. When she is not writing, Claire enjoys hiking, painting, and spending time with her lap dog, Sadie.

Bryan Hutchison is originally from Provo, Utah. He graduated with a BFA from BYU in 2013 and completed an MFA with an emphasis in New Forms/Integrated Practices at PRATT in 2015.

Sophie Lefens is a poet and writer from Chicago.

Richard Merelman, a native of Washington, D. C., is professor emeritus of Political Science at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. The Imaginary Baritone (Fireweed Press), his first book of poems, appeared in 2012. In 2016, Finishing Line Press published his chapbook, The Unnamed Continent. His poems have appeared in Contemporary American Voices, Main Street Rag, Measure, Stoneboat, Loch Raven Review, Common Ground Review, California Quarterly, and Blue Unicorn, among others. Poems are forthcoming in Stoneboat, Common Ground, and Lake Effect. He and his wife live in Madison, Wisconsin.

Aly Northrup is a senior at Brigham Young University studying Neuroscience with a minor in Writing and Rhetoric.

Dominic Shaw is studying English and Korean at Brigham Young University. He has a passion for written language and the emotions that writing can evoke. Dominic’s main interest lies in the cathartic and often redemptive quality that confessional nonfiction can provide. Despite the unfortunate events that take place within his piece, he has thoroughly renounced his career as a pyromaniac.

ShelliRae Spotts graduated with her MFA in Creative Nonfiction from Brigham Young University. When she is not teaching, grading papers, or attempting to write, she can usually be found sewing costumes, cooking dinner, or attending the theater with her husband and four delightfully geeky teenagers. She is an unrepentant Anglophile and loves musicals, sci-fi movies, and chocolate in any form (the darker the better).

Anne Thomas grew up in central California within an hour's drive of world class natural wonders in every direction. As a result, she is studying Conservation Biology and Bioinformatics with the goal of doing ecology research. One of her favorite ways to explore nature and other daily wonders is by turning it into words, and no matter what her career looks like in the future, she wants to write. She also loves reading and playing the cello.

Laura Toland lives in Utah with her adorable family. She enjoys cheesecake, chocolate cake, and ice cream cake.

Tesia Tsai is a second-year graduate student at BYU, studying Creative Writing with an emphasis in fiction. Apart from writing, she enjoys teaching, eating delicious food, and watching multiple TV shows at once.

Bryn Watkins doesn't know what to write about herself in this section. She feels uncomfortable referring to herself in the third person, and doesn't have much of an interesting life to report on anyway.
