

4-1-1964

Sunset

Marden J. Clark

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq>

Recommended Citation

Clark, Marden J. (1964) "Sunset," BYU Studies Quarterly: Vol. 5 : Iss. 2 , Article 9.
Available at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq/vol5/iss2/9>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the All Journals at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in BYU Studies Quarterly by an authorized editor of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact scholarsarchive@byu.edu, ellen\_amatangelo@byu.edu.

Sunset

"Sure purty, ain't it."

His words, called out across the grass, could only
Desecrate the truth and desecrate my thoughts and mood.

But what words, then?

How define that lovely light?

Chiaroscuro in technicolor?

On edge of clouds a red-gold glow that makes my mountains glow?

Refracted light from sun on edge of mist?

Light wavering at upward to seven thousand A's per second?

Beauty because we're there to see?

No words—there are none.

None could catch and hold a sky thus caught
And held by light. Caught and held to catch
And hold my breath, to catch and hold in awe
The sweep of sky and eye.

And if no words there's only he—and I

And all the rest. We see. We sense. We come to know
And love the light, that play of Holy Light.

Words fail.

The light fades now. He's long since gone.

But like the light he still reverberates.

"Sure purty, ain't it."

Marden J. Clark