Note from the Editor

All of the authors and editors that have contributed to this volume of Intuition will have graduated and moved on within just a couple of years. But there is something from each of us that will remain. Those that have contributed to the journal before us are just as much a part of Intuition as we are right now, and I am honored to have been a part of that.

This issue is one of our most varied issues yet, and showcases the broad scope of the psychology discipline. The topics you will encounter here include development (Brighton; Pehrson; Richardson), industrial/organizational psychology (Manjarrez), emotions (Kitzmiller; Leonhardt), clinical psychology (Cooper; Jones; Pehrson; Tindall; Warren), technology (Jones; Pehrson), neuroscience (Tindall), family relationships (Brighton; Leonhardt) and even primate behavior (Shackett).

Thank you to the authors, editors, faculty reviewers, and our advisor, Dr. Harold Miller, for your invaluable contributions to this issue. I would also like to thank you, the reader, for the special role that you play in supporting BYU's undergraduate scholars and making this endeavor worthwhile.
