

Purpose and Scope

Journal of Microfinance is a forum published semi-annually for the sharing of ideas and information pertaining to the practice of microfinance. The Journal's purpose is to influence the practice of microfinance by focusing on experiences and lessons learned from the field. The Journal presents the insights of practitioners and academics at the forefront of microfinance, bringing the issues forward that are affecting institutions worldwide.

The Journal publishes articles and special symposia by practitioners, donors, microfinance advocates, government officials, development specialists, and academics. Articles or special symposia accepted for publication will cover a broad range of topics, including: case studies, research findings, impact evaluations, microentrepreneurship, microenterprise development, institutional sustainability, fundraising and donor relations, and essays or debates on important issues in microfinance. The Journal seeks papers for publication in upcoming issues. See inside for submission information.
