2015-03-31

Putting Arens to the Test

Tyler A. Balli
Brigham Young University - Provo, tylerballi@gmail.com

Justin Cannon
Brigham Young University - Provo, justincannon33@gmail.com

Blake Brailsford
Brigham Young University - Provo, blakebrailsford93@gmail.com

Aubrey Kartchner
Brigham Young University - Provo, aubrey.kartchner@gmail.com

Hallie Johnson
Brigham Young University - Provo, halliejeanne14@gmail.com

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/fhssconference_studentpub

The Annual Mary Lou Fulton Mentored Research Conference showcases some of the best student research from the College of Family, Home, and Social Sciences. The mentored learning program encourages undergraduate students to participate in hands-on and practical research under the direction of a faculty member. Students create these posters as an aide in presenting the results of their research to the public, faculty, and their peers.

BYU ScholarsArchive Citation

Balli, Tyler A.; Cannon, Justin; Brailsford, Blake; Kartchner, Aubrey; and Johnson, Hallie, "Putting Arens to the Test" (2015). FHSS Mentored Research Conference. 266.
https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/fhssconference_studentpub/266

This Poster is brought to you for free and open access by the Family, Home, and Social Sciences at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in FHSS Mentored Research Conference by an authorized administrator of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact scholarsarchive@byu.edu, ellen_amatangelo@byu.edu.
Maori cannibalism reportedly most often occurred after battles, where the victors would eat the vanquished as a sign of total dominance over the enemy.

William E. Arens in his book The Man-Eating Myth argues that the thousands of accusations leveled at indigenous peoples, such as the Maori of New Zealand, are in fact invented. As one tests Arens’ theory in the Maori case it is difficult to dismiss the incredible amount of information in support of cannibalism. Although Maori cannibalism occurred, the frequency of its’ occurrence has been grossly exaggerated.

It was exaggerated by missionaries who needed to show the “lost” state of the Maori in order to secure more funding and evangelists to further spread Christianity. Explorers also exaggerated in hopes of impressing those back home with wild and adventurous stories.

Cannibalism amongst the Maori reached its’ demise somewhere between 1830 and 1840 due to the efforts of Christian missionaries.