Yes . . . But

Yes, He has might, power, glory, and exaltation,
But I, Mother God,
Am equal in might, power, glory, and exaltation.

Yes, you have learned to worship Him only,
But I, your first Mother,
You have forgotten and left behind.

Yes, you hear that I am “too sacred” to speak of,
But I, the Great Divine Feminine,
Am too sacred to be ignored.

Yes, He sent His Son to walk the earth and redeem you,
But I, the God of the Great Womb,
Brought forth mine Only Begotten Son and watched Him suffer for you.

Yes, you have been taught to always defer to men,
But child, I, the Tree of Wisdom,
Have never deferred to Him.

Yes, you have been taught to hide your body,
But I, Shaddai—Goddess of the Breasts,
Tell you that your body is made in my Holy Image.

Yes, you may think you are less than your brothers,
But I, the Creator of your world,
Assure you that your value is beyond imagination.

Yes, you have been told to not pray to me,
But I, the very foundation of this world,
Want you to speak with me endlessly.

Love,
Your Mother
