Acknowledgments

It would be difficult to acknowledge the assistance of the many individuals who helped prepare the symposium as well as the subsequent proceedings. But there are some who deserve special mention. The conference benefitted from the advance preparation of Elray Pederson, President of the Deseret Language and Linguistics Society, and Diane Strong-Krause, Secretary of the Society.

Important institutional support for the symposium or its proceedings was also provided by the BYU College of Humanities, the Linguistics department, and the Humanities Publication Center. With regard to the proceedings of the symposium, special thanks goes to Sterling Augustine, a consultant at the Computer Consultation Center, for designing the proceedings, and to Linda Hunter Adams, director of the Humanities Publication Center. Among the student volunteers deserving of special recognition are Jennifer Rey, Renée Johnson, and Elaine Aamodt.

Participants in the symposium were particularly honored by the participation of Joseph H. Greenberg, Professor Emeritus of Stanford University, who gave the keynote address, and by the participation of Zoltán Dörnyei and Sarah Thurrell of Eötvös Loránd University in Hungary. These speakers were all gracious enough to include versions of their presentations within the proceedings.
