Contributors

Christian Allred studied English and German at BYU, and is now starting a graduate program in American Studies at the University of Heidelberg. He enjoys songwriting, soccer, and sushi.

Amanda Charles is a senior at BYU and will be graduating in the fall of 2019 with a BA in English and a minor in nonprofit management. She hopes to work in the nonprofit sector as a content manager after graduation. When she's not writing, Amanda enjoys reading, traveling, and long-distance running.

Bayley Goldsberry is an English Teaching major and a global women's studies minor. Her hobbies include running with her dog (Fig), writing poetry, knitting, and having discussions about issues of social justice. She plans to teach middle school or high school in the coming year.

Kaitlin Hoelzer is an English major with minors in both History and global women's studies. She is interested in contemporary poetry, feminist studies, and African-American literature. Kaitlin plans to earn a PhD in American Literature. When she's not researching and writing, she likes to embroider, watercolor, and hike.

Leah Kelson Parks is currently an English Teaching major and a Spanish Teaching minor attending BYU. She works at the BYU Research and Writing Center, as a BYU Writing Fellow, and as a language teacher for senior missionaries at the Missionary Training Center in Provo, Utah. After she graduates, Leah hopes to infuse a love of language into high school students.

Ethan McGinty is currently a junior at Brigham Young University majoring in English and Portuguese Studies and minoring in Rhetoric.

His long-term goals include attending law school, building a personal library, and placing a brown leather armchair in that library. His short-term goals often revolve around surviving until the next long weekend.

Rebecca McKee returned to Brigham Young University after raising four children who graduated from BYU. In April 2019 Becky completed her BA in English with a minor in editing. She now works as a freelance editor and spends free time sewing, skiing, and traveling.

Kayla Merrick is an English major with minors in Japanese and creative writing, and will graduate from BYU Fall 2019. She comes from Orem, Utah, and has a family of four, plus one very grumpy bird. Kayla wants to become a novelist someday, and hopes that her love of Victorian literature will shine through in her work.

Olivia Moskot is an undergraduate student at Brigham Young University pursuing an English major and philosophy minor. She studies vulnerability using contemporary feminist theories and plans to continue doing so at a graduate level using literary criticism and moral philosophy.

Savanna Stone graduated from BYU in April 2019 with a degree in English and a minor in editing. She currently works as a copywriter and editor at Chirp, a company that specializes in helping people deal with their daily health issues so they can focus on living and loving life. Savanna hopes to continue to help people love life through her writing.

Summer Weaver is an English graduate student at BYU with an emphasis in American literature. Her research interests include Shoah literature and trauma studies.
