Pia Viscor lives in a 240-year-old house in Jystrup, Denmark, where she has been chair of the Local Historical Society for Jystrup and Valsøllille. She is a biologist, museum educator, and free-lance nature guide and historical tour guide. This entire issue of The Bridge is devoted to her innovative research on the role of religion in forming links between early immigrants from Denmark to America.

Supported in part by a grant from the Bodtker Fund of the Danish American Heritage Society, Pia Viscor has visited Racine and other parts of Danish America to pursue her research on emigration from the four Sjælland parishes of Jystrup, Valsøllille, Haraldsted, and Allindemagle. She would like to hear from people whose ancestors came from those parishes.

You can reach her by e-mail at <pia.viscor@jystrup-net.dk>. To order her books and learn more about her and her projects, visit her website at <<http://www.viscor.net/index.html>>.

The Vester lives in a 240-year-old house in Lyngby, Denmark where she has been chair of the Local Historical Society for Lyngby and Vesterhøj. She is a biologist, translator, editor and for many years a guide and historical tour leader. The entire issue of The Bridge is devoted to her innovative research on the role of a woman in founding the first botanical gardens in Denmark to America. Her research is supported in part by a grant from the Godtfred Lund of the Danish American Historical Society. The Vester has visited Rønne and other parts of Danish America to pursue her research on emigration from the four island parishes of Lyngby, Vesterhøj, Hårlev and Ålborg. She would like to meet with people whose ancestors came from those parishes.

You can reach her by e-mail at <vester@lyngby-net.dk>. To order her books and learn more about her and her projects, visit her website at <http://www.vester-net/index.html>. She lives in Ålborg, Denmark. She travels to the USA and serves as a member of the Board of Directors of DAHS. Her extensive contacts in Denmark have been invaluable to the Society and should help to maintain the high level of contributions to The Bridge by Danish authors.

John Robert Christianson is also a member of the Board of Directors of DAHS. He served as editor of The Bridge from 1999 until the end of 2002. He has frequently contributed articles and book reviews to The Bridge and hopes to continue doing so as Co-Editor.

Our thanks go to Peter L. Peterson for his masterful editing of The Bridge during the last six years. He built on a solid foundation laid by the late Arnold N. Bodtker and Egon Bodtker as previous editors. He will continue to serve as Assistant Editor and will help, among many other contributions, to assure a steady stream of well-written book reviews and review essays.
