SCOTT HANSEN

1. a walnut loved after the vise. 2. a measure of wood beneath splitting-wedge mathematics. 3. an ear of corn stripped and torn for gold. 4. (archaic) a wishingplace-dig that finally kisses the shovel's scuffed lip with water. 5. a coconut cast down, wounded on a wooden stake until it offers no more resistance, then slit open for milk. 6. (informal) an imprisoned warrior, now open to supply the morning's heartblood. 7. an orange cut apart and crushed for breakfast. 8. a chest of waterlogged wood, exhumed at the end of a tattered map. 9. a door smashed off the hinges and trampled with pistols and flashlights hunting fugitives. 10. a boulder nibbled at by chisles to reveal the immanent passion in marble. 11. (slang) a crashing between steel and flint that breeds fire. 12. a cardboard form covered with crepe paper that you question with a stick until it answers in candy.
