

1984

Rain Coming

John W. Schouten

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/inscape>

Part of the Arts and Humanities Commons

Recommended Citation

Schouten, John W. (1984) "Rain Coming," Inscape: Vol. 4: No. 1, Article 11.

Available at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/inscape/vol4/iss1/11>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in Inscape by an authorized editor of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact ellen_amatangelo@byu.edu.

RAIN COMING

The limbs of the sycamore flatten
out against this Utah sky
like the lines of a road map.
There's a breeze.

I can almost smell the distant blackness, the rising Columbia.
At night sometimes it turns
on itself, flows backward
seeking its source,
and the black-mouthed Chinook ride it home. I've seen it from a car window sailing
down the gorge, waves and debris
rolling gently upstream,
silver backs lapping the surface,
going home.
That dark eastward flow.

John W. Schouten