

4-1-1983

Silver Fish

Orrin G. Hatch

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq>

 Part of the Mormon Studies Commons, and the Religious Education Commons

Recommended Citation

Hatch, Orrin G. (1983) "Silver Fish," BYU Studies Quarterly. Vol. 23 : Iss. 2 , Article 12.
Available at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq/vol23/iss2/12>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in BYU Studies Quarterly by an authorized editor of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact scholarsarchive@byu.edu, ellen_amatangelo@byu.edu.

Silver Fish

Politics is like a silver fish bug,
 Generally flitting over a stagnant pond,
 In which nothing grows, nothing lives,
 And all who gaze in wonderment,
 Transfixed with the darting insect
 Alighting now and then
 To accomplish nothing special
 Until its dried-up carcass disintegrates
 As more winged creatures continue
 As though nothing happened to begin with.

Politics exhilarates, when one has won,
 When one is listened to,
 Or wins a major battle for good—
 At least, we think for good.
 But wins are transient
 In the never-ceasing changeover
 From one person to another,
 From one regime to yet one more,
 Until the win is transmogrified
 Into the floor, outside the door,
 Through which it earnestly came—
 To begin with.

Politics is shaped, influenced, drawn anew
 Each day, each hour, by press and you.
 Press, with admitted double standards,
 Much kinder and accepting
 Towards the more liberal view;
 You—sometimes apathetic,
 Sometimes true,
 Yet never knowing and seldom caring,
 At least enough, you knew.
 You should have worked, studied,
 Perhaps prayed—perhaps,
 But why? What can one person do?

Politics sometimes is one simple vote,
 The vote which makes a difference,
 Which defeats or passes:
 That, upon which life and/or death depends,
 Unless oblivious to the end.
 Even that lies relatively unimportant
 In our sight,
 And calm regression,
 To the daze of watching silver fish,
 Puts us asleep
 Or into lethargy once more.

—Orrin G. Hatch

Orrin G. Hatch is a U.S. Senator from Utah, 1976–.