

7-1-1987

Imprint: Fragment from a Childhood

Dixie Partridge

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq>

Recommended Citation

Partridge, Dixie (1987) "Imprint: Fragment from a Childhood," BYU Studies Quarterly: Vol. 27 : Iss. 3 , Article 16.
Available at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq/vol27/iss3/16>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the All Journals at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in BYU Studies Quarterly by an authorized editor of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact scholarsarchive@byu.edu.

Imprint: Fragment from a Childhood

Elegy for Lee Henderson

Nearly three the time the thresher came,
I followed its deep ruts through the gateway,
Watched giant gears churn
To the pull of seven horse-teams:

From my fence post, I pretend
To be the teamster on his platform;
Round and round I pace the teams
In toasting sun. Father pitches bundles.

Through cold days in October
I play in the thresher tracks,
Then they are gone with winter
And I forget them.

One day, not Sunday, we go to church.
Father isn't there; I sit in front with Mama.
I look for him at home, crowded
Among neighbors and people I don't know.

A morning next spring, I walk
Into the gateway streaked with thaw,
And there are the ruts, solid as ever.

I set my foot into a track, step
Carefully to keep the pattern
Until it disappears
Under leftover crusts of snow.

Each day with the thaw
I watch the ruts come back
As if they never went away.

—Dixie Partridge
for my father

Dixie Partridge is a widely published poet living in Richland, Washington. Some of her poems have won William Stafford Awards in recent years, and her first book of poetry, Deer in the Haystacks, was published in 1984.