

10-1-1988

Fondest Dream: (For Bruce R. McConkie)

R. Blain Andrus

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq>

Recommended Citation

Andrus, R. Blain (1988) "Fondest Dream: (For Bruce R. McConkie)," BYU Studies Quarterly. Vol. 28 : Iss. 4 , Article 7.

Available at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq/vol28/iss4/7>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in BYU Studies Quarterly by an authorized editor of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact scholarsarchive@byu.edu, ellen_amatangelo@byu.edu.

Fondest Dream

(For Bruce R. McConkie)

Although body invaded: carnivorous cells, spirit, still slick clean,
hoisted flesh to the pulpit.

I saw electricity arrange itself
to your image:
face, death-drawn, unadjustable
by the twist of a knob,
and words
that drained out mechanical;
but lost nothing in the translation.

Your message: atonement;
when with every reason
to have thought fall
the cruelest of seasons, disguising decay behind color;
or, beneath linen's cover, surrendered until wasted cold.

But each morning, dressed;
you, stretched out like Lazarus, waiting for a public moment to say: I have known faith . . .
and still believe;
with tears
that might have been for many reasons, but none so lasting
as to wet Heaven's feet.

—R. Blain Andrus