New Appointment

Dr. Matthew Hayes is the new librarian for Japanese Studies and Asian American Studies at Duke University Libraries. Dr. Hayes earned his Ph.D. at UCLA in the Department of Asian Languages and Cultures. His dissertation is entitled “Faith, Devotion, and the Transmission of Religious Knowledge: Ritual Learning and Kōshiki Performance in Early Modern Japan.” He is an educator and researcher with comprehensive training in East Asian languages and religious cultures. He also has experience in archival preservation, cataloging, and metadata of rare Japanese texts, especially Buddhist texts. He has worked on two archival collections at UCLA: Toganoo Shōun 桐尾祥雲 Collection and the Buddhist Churches of America \(BCA\) archive.
