

7-1-1997

In the Rising

Nancy Baird

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq>

 Part of the Mormon Studies Commons, and the Religious Education Commons

Recommended Citation

Baird, Nancy (1997) "In the Rising," BYU Studies Quarterly. Vol. 37 : Iss. 3 , Article 6.
Available at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq/vol37/iss3/6>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in BYU Studies Quarterly by an authorized editor of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact ellen_amatangelo@byu.edu.

In the Rising

When my life runs out my pores, rises like a field
of corn in summer,
twisting silk, white and blowing,
I will claim pieces of my body—
seed fragments of this flesh
I have grappled with and loved,
fought to save from corruption.
I will not abandon all those hungry cells to dust.

It has been sweet—the skin stretched across my ribs,
the feel of hands.
Enough sun engraves a retina,
slowly changes scent of skin.
In all this,
the humiliation of clay has served, the gift of pain become a jagged doorway.

These belong to me,
their growing fire embedded in the flesh, not sieved through memory but taken in hand,
heavy as shot,

the fistfuls of light and evil
that make a life.

—Nancy Baird