

4-1-2001

Destination

Mark Bennion

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq>

Part of the Mormon Studies Commons, and the Religious Education Commons

Recommended Citation

Bennion, Mark (2001) "Destination," BYU Studies Quarterly: Vol. 40 : Iss. 2 , Article 16.
Available at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq/vol40/iss2/16>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in BYU Studies Quarterly by an authorized editor of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact ellen_amatangelo@byu.edu.

Destination

Whenever I leave home,
I choke on the aftertaste of shortbread and tear my clothes in an open field;

I drift in the dust of country stores and make grass rise out of my cheek. It's better when I return a cub to its den. It's better when the sky is mauve blankets.

It's better that the bush isn't consumed.
It's better when I write autobiography.

My mind is the late Sabbath candle.
My temple burns with reasons to exist.
A cup of water is just within reach. I put my hand to the plow in a field of wheat.

I weep at the color green. I taste salt in lemon cake. I offer myself to the ancient texts, words strong as leviathan and robe, words full of hammers and lamps. As soon as they are spoken, an angel flies with the sound of a trumpet; I will study that air a little; I will not agitate it. I am a child of eternal mirrors. I was born in a seal; I breathe because of fervor, because of the watchmen's grace; I forget creation has not ended. I seek for the condition of the hat's shelter, the mime's speaking shadow. I harvest olives and grapes.

I confess noonday in the Book of Mormon: it is Joseph's front door, it is a vial of oil, one of the psalms in a dead man's quiver, one child poking through the straw and leaves.
On the eve of new knowledge, on the eve of an open shrift, I cook husks primed for a sheep's belly, I gurgle a cup of brack from the Great Salt Lake; I recall that home will diminish the moon, candles will die in the bushel, fields will reap the dusk's glaze.

I stand with white cloth reading Young and Smith. I look for a shortcut to Temple Square. A stranger grabs the back of my feet. I tell him of the sweet roll in my stomach. I point to the vanilla between my teeth. I say, It's what I taste before sleep; what I wake up to. He says, "It's the altar you can't forget."

—Mark Bennion