A Pig In A Wig Book: What This Story Needs Is A Bang And A Clang

Ariel Woodbury

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/cbmr

BYU ScholarsArchive Citation
Available at: https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/cbmr/vol38/iss11/42

This Book Review is brought to you for free and open access by the All Journals at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in Children's Book and Media Review by an authorized editor of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact scholarsarchive@byu.edu, ellen_amatangelo@byu.edu.
The book review is about a children's book titled "What This Story Needs Is A Bang And A Clang" by Emma J. Virjan. The reviewer, Ariel Woodbury, provides a summary of the book, which includes a pig building a stage and conducting the Pig in a Wig Band, where all of her friends join in with different instruments and all is going well until an elephant sees a mouse and knocks everyone over when he tries to run away. They start playing again just in time for their audience to arrive.

The book is full of fun onomatopoeia. While the text is short and simple, the variety of onomatopoeia (words like tish, bwap, and brup) may be difficult for beginner readers to understand. The style of illustration and narration are the same as Virjan’s other Pig in a Wig books. It starts off with, “What this story needs is . . .” and then lists the sounds that each animal brings into the band as they appear. The style is much the same as Mo Willem’s Elephant and Piggie books, but with a little more variation and detail in the illustration.