Turtle can't seem to find his favorite book! Maybe he shared it with a friend? He asks all his friends if they've seen his book. They all respond yes, but that one of their other friends is borrowing it now. They then offer Turtle one of their favorite books to borrow. Turtle declines, wanting his own book. In the end, he finds it and goes to read it by himself; however, when he hears all his friends reading and discussing their favorite books, he goes over there to share and read their favorite books too.

This book is adorable and full of bright and charming illustrations that draw the reader to the book from the shelf. The drawings are simple and clean, making the book feel organized and attractive. The bright colors and the characters' love for reading create a happy atmosphere. Its message is one of friendship and sharing and it promotes a love for reading. With big pictures and fewer words, this book is perfect for young readers and little children. Adorable, simple, and fun, this book is sure to be enjoyable!
