

4-1-2021

Moon to Moon Nights

Dixie Partridge

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq>

Part of the Mormon Studies Commons, and the Religious Education Commons

Recommended Citation

Partridge, Dixie (2021) "Moon to Moon Nights," BYU Studies Quarterly. Vol. 60 : Iss. 2 , Article 7.
Available at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq/vol60/iss2/7>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in BYU Studies Quarterly by an authorized editor of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact ellen_amatangelo@byu.edu.

Moon to Moon Nights

like time-lapse film,
signify now a moment,
now a lifetime. A bonedrift of stone shapes pale and rise like years along garden's edge. . . .

What erasures there are in memory remain a presence—

like every pasture since that first childhood bringing in of the cows.
A remnant fear of drought surfaces again, decades after turns for irrigation on your father's farm, changing canvas dams in the shallow ditches, twice before bed, again before dawn—that early acquaintance with twilights, the lit variegations of water moving in the dark.

Now the voices of children—your own—ribbon the sheer deep of sky

no bears out tonight

what time is it Moon?

And their children answer, present tense,
your own voice fading
with stars in this moonrise light.

Like the river and all rivers you have ever known—undercurrents pulling out of sight—

night breezes tune in and out with peripherals of sound, their patterns fractal, ongoing,
and still unsayable.

—Dixie Partridge

This poem tied for first place in the 2021 Clinton F.
Larson Poetry Contest, sponsored by BYU Studies.