

2022

March Morning, New York City

David Passey

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq>

 Part of the Mormon Studies Commons, and the Religious Education Commons

Recommended Citation

Passey, David (2022) "March Morning, New York City," BYU Studies Quarterly. Vol. 61: Iss. 1, Article 13.
Available at: <https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/byusq/vol61/iss1/13>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in BYU Studies Quarterly by an authorized editor of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact ellen_amatangelo@byu.edu.

March Morning, New York City

At last the earth lifts the cobbled street between Church and City Hall
back in line with the sun.

The host of sparrows in their barren scaffold catch fire again, flickering and dancing like bright bits of glass.

The forsythia hedge at the iron gate—
yesterday a row of tattered sticks, today
a shining brass parade.

And the grey coated regular strangers,
befriended by this old street, drink
the new light with their eyes and faces,

tasting maybe the very beginning of time
when the sun first made the world
a thing that could be filled with joy.

—David Passey

This poem was an honorable mention in the 2021 Clinton F.
Larson Poetry Contest, sponsored by BYU Studies.