A Day with Dogs

This book is similar to Richard Scarry’s What Do People Do All Day?, as the title page begins with the question, “What do dogs do all day?” and explores dogs in all different settings. Dogs enjoying different seasons, vehicles, and rooms in the house can be found on each page. The alphabet, colors, numbers, seasons, and other simple but important concepts are introduced in an entertaining way in this book.

Children could spend hours and hours enjoying this book. Dog-loving children will especially enjoy this book. They will love to identify their favorite dogs they’ve seen by their real names. Very young children can easily enjoy this book with an adult who is willing to read the many labels and speech bubbles on each page. The font used in this book is a capital letters. It is very humorous, and children will love to find dogs in the bathtub, a dog in his underwear, and dogs participating in Kung Fu!
