Weir Do is new in school and has made some new friends, including Bella Allen, a girl he really likes. He is settling in quite nicely, but when Bella Allen's birthday costume party comes up, Weir feels the pressure to avoid any misstep that might get him uninvited. He finds a perfect present, a perfect costume and gets set to go. However, the day does not go as planned and the success of the party is threatened. Weir's family steps in with fun activities so the party is saved, and happily, Bella Allen loves Weir's gift.

Once again, Anh Do writes a funny book for young readers. Weir Do's character is very relatable because he is a boy who is good at some things, bad at others, and wants nothing more than to belong. This book addresses topics such as social acceptance, friendship, and self-confidence in a hilarious way. The illustrations and graphics contribute substantially to the humor, which does include some mild bathroom humor. Children ages six to ten will be attracted to this book.
