A baby elephant is somewhere near, but a lion family says she's not with them. A shark and her young know she's not under the sea. She is also not with a wolf and her cub. It is too cold for her to be with the penguin and her little chick. From one set of animals to another we go until we find the baby elephant with her mother.

This interactive book takes readers on a delightful adventure of discovery. Folding out each page multiple times morphs the illustrations into three different sets of animals in a perfectly ingenious way. Readers will delight in seeing how each illustration builds and changes to make something new, such as when the skin of the shark becomes the sky and the space in its mouth a toucan's beak. The sparse text supports the illustrations as each animal offers simple answers to the question of just where the baby elephant is. This book is enchanting, and it will amaze readers and inspire their imaginations.
