ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

After completing my work on Harmonizing Isaiah: Combining Ancient Sources, I invited two respected Hebraists at Brigham Young University to critically review both the introduction and translation—Stephen D. Ricks, professor of Hebrew and cognate learning, and Michael D. Rhodes, associate research professor of ancient scripture. Donald E. Norton, professor of English at BYU, helped to standardize the punctuation and to review the grammar of the introduction and translation. Davin Anderson and Kevin Tolley source-checked and reviewed for accuracy the more than four hundred notes that accompany the translation.

I especially acknowledge Jacob D. Rawlins, assistant editor at the BYU Institute for the Study and Preservation of Ancient Religious Texts. He carefully examined the manuscript and conducted the content and format editing. I also thank Alison V. P. Coutts, director of publications for the Institute, for her leadership in moving this translation from a manuscript through the peer review and editing processes to a published volume.

In addition, Julie A. Greer, Paula W. Hicken, and Linda M. Sheffield helped prepare this book for publication.

Each of these individuals offered valuable suggestions that helped to polish the manuscript. I gratefully acknowledge their thoughtful efforts and their professionalism.
