200 volumes.

344 titles—
168 surveys &
176 reports.

a collection of surveys and field studies, compiled by the Graduate School of Land Economics (中央政治理學院) Central Political Institute (中央政治理校) (now National Chengchi University 國立政治大學), under the direction of Dr. Tseng Hsiao 蕭錦, director of the Graduate School of Land Economics.

this materials contain basic data on a period of modern China that is still too little understood. Today, the research problem is compounded by the fact that too much of the raw data is housed on the mainland in Communist hands. But from these field studies, scholars can obtain firsthand information on the economic, social, and political life of the 1930s.

Warlords, Artists, and Commoners
JAPAN IN THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY
George Elison and Bardwell L. Smith, editors

Some of the leading American and Canadian scholars of Japan focus on a fascinating century. John Whitney Hall gives an account of the momentous institutional changes which were the sixteenth century's legacy to Japan. V. Dixon Morris discusses the meaning of urban autonomy in the late medieval Japanese context, using the city of Sakai as his model. George Elison devotes one essay to outlining the patterns of Momoyama history, focusing on the dramatic part played by the first of the period's "Three Heroes," Oda Nobunaga; and he treats the case of another of the "Great Unifiers," Toyotomi Hideyoshi, in a second essay, which concentrates on the aristocratization of that spectacular parvenu. Carolyn Wheelwright visualizes the lost paintings which Kano Eitoku, who transformed Japanese pictorial style, produced for Nobunaga's residential castle at Azuchi. Donald Keene portrays a poet, Sato-mura Jōha, who made a career in times of strife. Frank Hoff traces the paradoxical coordinates of city and country in popular songs and the performing arts. William P. Malm writes about the musical activities which reflected and contributed to the dynamic nature of the Momoyama period. H. Paul Varies investigates the culture of the tea ceremony, that aesthetic ritual peculiar to the Japanese, from its origins to its sixteenth-century elaboration. The volume concludes with a bibliographical essay by Bardwell L. Smith.

George Elison completed the Ph.D. in history and Far Eastern languages at Harvard University. He teaches Japanese history, literature, and language at Indiana University. Bardwell L. Smith is the John W. Nason Professor of Asian Studies at Carleton College, Northfield, Minnesota. He did his undergraduate and graduate studies at Yale, and was a member of the Yale University Council from 1969 to 1974.

Asian Socioeconomic Development
A NATIONAL ACCOUNTS APPROACH
Kazushi Ohtkawa and Bernard Key, editors

Economists and statisticians from seven Asian countries discuss the use of national accounts in the developing world, concentrating on three major areas of concern. The first is the application of the national accounts framework to developing countries. Several characteristics of developing economies distinguish them from those of the developed countries for which the accounts were originally devised, and necessitate adjustments and modifications. A second area of emphasis is the quantification of social development and the integration of the resultant statistical data into a coherent system. The third major topic is the measurement and analysis of income distribution.

Kazushi Ohkawa is emeritus professor of economics at Hitotsubashi University and research and training director of the International Development Center of Japan (IDCJ). Bernard Key, formerly professor of Japanese studies at the University of Western Australia, Perth, and senior economist at the IDCJ, is currently senior project director at ASIJ Market Research (Japan), Inc.

Ethnic Groups and Social Change in a Chinese Market Town
C. Fred Blake

This study focuses on how a number of regional and speech groups, including Hakka, Cantonese, and Hokkien, interact when they come into contact in a particular social setting. The author spent nearly two years living in the market town of Sai Kung in the Hong Kong New Territories, visiting the surrounding village and boat communities, interviewing people and observing their interpersonal behavior and collective activities. He attempts to show that these groups are all equally Chinese and that they constitute ethnic identities which people use to organize and to reorganize social relations in the process of adapting to a changing environment.

C. Fred Blake is an assistant professor of anthropology at the University of Hawaii at Manoa.

Soviet Policy in Asia—
Expansion or Accommodation?
Sung-jo Han editor

The emergence of the Soviet Union as the foremost military power in East Asia and its expansionist policy manifested in several parts of the world since the mid-1970s raise questions which require careful examination and thorough discussion.

In this provocative volume, thirteen distinguished scholars—namely, Robert A. Scalapino, Harry Gelman, Byung-joon Ahn, Paul F. Langer, Richard H. Solomon, Dimitri K. Simes, Herbert S. Levine, Robert W. Campbell, Key-whan Kim, In-ho Lee, Chang-yoon Choi, Sung-jo Han, and Coit Dennis Blacker—analyze the goals and capabilities of the Soviet Union in its policy toward the world and Asia, and define the nature of the Soviet challenge in the area.

Syngman Rhee and American Involvement in Korea: 1942-1960
— A Personal Narrative
By Robert T. Oliver

For two decades, during the painful birth pangs of the Republic of Korea, then during the Korean War and the contorted Panmunjom Truce negotiations, at the 1954 Geneva Conference, and during the hopeful but ill fated efforts to rehabilitate the war-ravaged nation into “the showplace of democracy in the Far East.” Dr. Oliver was at once President Rhee’s close friend and confidant and his confidential advisor on international relations.

It is from this background, and drawing upon the unpublished and hitherto inaccessible body of their private correspondence and intimate journals, that Dr. Oliver has composed this frank and detailed narrative.

Shang Civilization
Kwang-chih Chang

From the most up-to-date archaeological and textual records available, K. C. Chang reconstructs the culture of one of the most politically powerful and artistically notable civilizations of the ancient world. Chang treats extensively such topics as the state government of the Shang dynasty; its economic, kingship–clan, and lineage systems; the social context of its art and religion; and the significance of the Shang in the ancient world and in evolutionary perspective.

"The independent origins of Chinese civilization remain a fascinating topic, and there is no better guide to the subject than Chang."

Money and Banking in Contemporary Japan
The Theoretical Setting and Its Application
Yoshio Suzuki
translated by John G. Greenwood with a foreword by James Tobin and Hugh Patrick

The translation into English of this prize-winning Japanese book is a major contribution to our understanding of Japanese financial institutions and monetary policy. Suzuki applies the theoretical framework developed by James Tobin and William Brainard to the actual circumstances of Japan and finds that the Tobin-Brainard model conforms well to the Japanese data; that is, Japan responds to income and price signals in much the same way other market-oriented economies do. $18.00

Traces of the Brush
Studies in Chinese Calligraphy
Shen C. Y. Fu in collaboration with Marilyn W. Fu, Mary G. Neill, and Mary Jane Clark

Calligraphy in China has been traditionally considered the epitome of artistic accomplishment, superior even to painting. Drawing upon ninety major examples from Western collections, this beautifully illustrated book broadens the historical and aesthetic context in which calligraphy has been viewed outside China and captures the elegance and beauty of this exquisite art form. 258 illus.
