Reader Response

Children's Book Review

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/cbmr

BYU ScholarsArchive Citation
Available at: https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/cbmr/vol10/iss4/5

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in Children's Book and Media Review by an authorized editor of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact scholarsarchive@byu.edu, ellen_amatangelo@byu.edu.
Responses From Readers

We have heard from some of you during the last month. Barbara Lewis wrote to tell us that her favorite Newbery Award Book was Roll of Thunder, Hear My Cry (Taylor, 1977). Her least favorite book was Westing Game (Raskin, 1979). She felt that one book that should have won a Newbery was Sourland (Armstrong, 1971). Her favorite Caldecott was St. George and the Dragon (by Margaret Hodges; Illustrated by Trina Schart Hyman, 1985) and she didn't have a least favorite. Her nomination for the best picture book published in 1989 was Beth Peck's illustrations for Truman Capote's A Christmas Morning. She's right. "The naive, wispy feeling of Peck’s watercolors evoke a special characterization of 'Buddy' and 'My Friend'." You'll want to look at A Christmas Morning to see if you think the Caldecott committee missed a prospective award winner.

We encourage responses from other readers. Duplicate the response page and check the appropriate age group when you send yours in. We’ll publish your responses in a later issue.
CHILDREN'S BOOK REVIEW

Adult [ ] Young Adult [ ] Child [ ]

City __________________________ State __________________________

Tell us what your favorite read-aloud books are.

_________________________________________________________________

_________________________________________________________________

_________________________________________________________________

_________________________________________________________________

_________________________________________________________________