(Submitted by Amy Heinrich, Columbia University)

In the June 2004 issue of the Journal of East Asian Libraries (No. 133), on page 15 of the article “Contributing Chinese Records to OCLC: Hong Kong Baptist University Library Experience” by Lolita Kwok, there is a blank after 2 in the list Cataloguing records. In fact, there are only 3 items in the list; nothing was omitted. The list, properly numbered, should read:

1. MARC21 was used but Chinese data in the bibliographic records was kept in regular fields, with no linking romanized forms;
2. Traditional Chinese characters were used for the transcription of Chinese language materials, even though some books published in Mainland China use simplified Chinese characters in the chief source;
3. Chinese subject headings were assigned based on Zhongguo fen lei zhu ti ci biao (中国分类主题词表), and English subject headings such as Library of Congress Subject Headings (LCSH) were not used.

The Editor sincerely regrets this error.
