Jacob's Textual Legacy

John Hilton III
johnhiltoniii@byu.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/facpub

Part of the Biblical Studies Commons, History of Christianity Commons, Mormon Studies Commons, and the Religious Thought, Theology and Philosophy of Religion Commons

BYU ScholarsArchive Citation
Hilton, John III, "Jacob's Textual Legacy" (2013). Faculty Publications. 1371.
https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/facpub/1371

This Peer-Reviewed Article is brought to you for free and open access by BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in Faculty Publications by an authorized administrator of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact scholarsarchive@byu.edu, ellen_amatangelo@byu.edu.
T oday, members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints know what texts are considered authoritative—namely, the standard works. As members, we recognize a formal process for canonization; for example, at the Saturday afternoon session of general conference in April 1976, President N. Eldon Tanner announced that the First Presidency and Quorum of the Twelve had approved two revelations for inclusion in the Pearl of Great Price and called for a sustaining vote. This concept of canonization in the restored church has echoes from earlier Christian practices and councils.

But what of earlier times? How did people in Old Testament and Book of Mormon times know which texts were authoritative? We may not know how they decided what was normative and what was not, but we can perhaps determine if a text was treated as authoritative. This paper will explore the likelihood that Jacob’s words, both in 2 Nephi 9 as well as in the book that bears his name, were employed by other prophets as an authoritative source. Specifically, I will identify phrases that are unique to Jacob (or nearly so) and discuss how Nephi, King Benjamin, and Moroni utilized these words in their own unique ways. The consistent use of Jacob’s teachings in the Book of Mormon demonstrates that he was a powerful literary figure. His words influenced not only future generations of modern readers, but also prophets of his own time.

Three Cases of Textual Echoes from Jacob

Jacob and Nephi

While we will see that prophets who lived centuries after Jacob often drew on his words, it appears that he also influenced Nephi’s teachings. It may seem strange to think of Nephi’s public sermons as having been influenced by his younger brother, yet the tight relationships between 2 Nephi 9 (Jacob’s sermon) and 2 Nephi 28 (part of a later sermon given by Nephi) lead one to believe that this is in fact the case (see table 1).

Jacob said, “Because they are rich they despise the poor, and they persecute the meek, and their hearts are upon their treasures” (2 Nephi 9:30). In 2 Nephi 28:13, Nephi states that the proud “rob the poor because of their fine sanctuaries” and “fine clothing” and that “they persecute the meek” because of their pride. In this instance, we find both conceptual and textual echoes from Jacob’s earlier words. In both instances, the proud (wealthy) rob (or despise) the poor and persecute the meek because of their pride (wealth). Nephi further states that “the wise, and the learned, and the rich, that are puffed up in the pride of their hearts, and all those who preach false doctrines, and all those who commit whoredoms, and pervert the right way of the Lord, wo, wo, wo be unto them, saith the Lord God Almighty, for they shall be thrust down to hell!” (2 Nephi 28:15). Each italicized

The prophet Jacob at the top is quoted in succession (counterclockwise) by Nephi, King Benjamin, and Moroni. "That They May Learn" [Jacob 4:3]. © Annie Henrie 2013. Used by permission.

FROM THE EDITOR:
The Church today has a clear mechanism for determining what is accepted by the members as scripture. The Book of Mormon, however, never defines how earlier Nephite written records became normative for later generations. John Hilton, through careful analysis, has been able to trace the influence of an early Nephite writer, Jacob (Nephi’s brother), through a succession of later prophets and thus document the authoritative character of Jacob’s writings.
FROM THE EDITOR

The Church today has a clear mechanism for determining what is accepted by the members as scripture. The Book of Mormon, however, never defines how earlier Nephite written records became normative for later generations. John Hilton, through careful analysis, has been able to trace the influence of an early Nephite writer, Jacob (Nephi’s brother), through a succession of later prophets and thus document the authoritative character of Jacob’s writings.

Three Cases of Textual Echoes from Jacob

Jacob and Nephi

While we will see that prophets who lived centuries after Jacob often drew on his words, it appears that he also influenced Nephi’s teachings. It may seem strange to think of Nephi’s public sermons as having been influenced by his younger brother, yet the tight relationships between 2 Nephi 9 (Jacob’s sermon)7 and 2 Nephi 28 (part of a later sermon given by Nephi) lead one to believe that this is in fact the case (see table 2).

Jacob said, “Because they are rich they despise the poor, and they persecute the meek, and their hearts are upon their treasures” (2 Nephi 9:30). In 2 Nephi 28:13, Nephi states that the proud “rob the poor because of their fine sanctuaries and fine clothing” and that “they persecute the meek because of their pride. In this instance, we find both conceptual and textual echoes from Jacob’s earlier words. In both instances, the proud (wealthy) rob (or despise) the poor and persecute the meek because of their pride. Nephi further states that “the wise, and the learned, and the rich, that are puffed up in the pride of their hearts, and all those who preach false doctrines, and all those who commit whoredoms, and pervert the right way of the Lord, woe, woe, woe be unto them, saith the Lord God Almighty, for they shall be thrust down to hell!” (2 Nephi 28:15). Each italicized phrase or word in the preceding verse repeats Jacob’s words in 2 Nephi 9:36 or 42. Jacob taught, “Wo unto them who commit whoredoms, for they shall be thrust down to hell” (v. 36), and Nephi expands this fate to “the wise, and the learned, and the rich, that are puffed up” (2 Nephi 28:15; compare 9:42). These words that appear first in Jacob’s sermon and later in Nephi’s occur nowhere else in scripture, even though the concept they describe is fairly universal.

The prophet Jacob at the top is quoted in succession (counterclockwise) by Nephi, King Benjamin, and Moroni. "That They May Learn" (Jacob 4:3). © Annie Henrie 2013. Used by permission.

Jacob stated that “the atonement satisfieth the demands of his justice upon all those who have not the law given to them, that they are delivered from that awful monster, death and hell, and the devil, and the lake of fire and brimstone, which is endless torment” (2 Nephi 9:26; compare 9:19). In 2 Nephi 28:23, Nephi again utilizes this phraseology seemingly borrowed from Jacob to warn both those who are pacified and those who are angry with the truth that “they are grasped with . . . death, and hell; and the devil,8 and all that have been seized therewith must stand before the throne of God, and be judged according to their works, from whence they must go into the place prepared for them, even a lake of fire and brimstone, which is endless torment.” While Jacob employs these phrases to illustrate the majesty of the Savior’s atonement, Nephi applies them differently—to warn those who are pacified and are “at ease in Zion . . . and are angry because of the truth of God” (vv. 24, 28).

In 2 Nephi 9:27-38, Jacob pronounces ten woes, or warnings, on the rich. John W. Welch sees this as significant, observing that Jacob’s “‘ten woes’ function as the equivalent of a contemporaneous Nephite set of ten commandments.”9 There are

Table 1. Nephi’s allusions in 2 Nephi 28 to Jacob’s words in 2 Nephi 9

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Allusion</th>
<th>Jacob’s Words</th>
<th>Nephi’s Words</th>
<th>Text</th>
<th>Times Exact Phrase Is Used Elsewhere in Scripture</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:30</td>
<td>2 Nephi 28:13</td>
<td>they persecute the meek</td>
<td>0 (but JST Luke 16:21 is similar)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:42</td>
<td>2 Nephi 28:15</td>
<td>the wise, and the learned, and the rich, that are puffed up</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:36</td>
<td>2 Nephi 28:15</td>
<td>who commit whoredoms</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:19, 26</td>
<td>2 Nephi 28:23</td>
<td>death, and hell; and the devil</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:19, 26</td>
<td>2 Nephi 28:23</td>
<td>lake of fire and brimstone, which is endless torment</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:38</td>
<td>2 Nephi 28:28</td>
<td>and in fine, wo unto all those who . . .</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Nephi, in 2 Nephi 28, was clearly quoting from his brother Jacob’s words in 2 Nephi 9. © Annie Henrie 2013. Used by permission. phrase or word in the preceding verse repeats Jacob's words in 2 Nephi 9:36 or 42. Jacob taught, "Wo unto them who commit whoredoms, for they shall be thrust down to hell" (v. 36), and Nephi expands this fate to "the wise, and the learned, and the rich, that are puffed up" (2 Nephi 28:15; compare 9:24). These words that appear first in Jacob's sermon and later in Nephi's occur nowhere else in scripture, even though the concept they describe is fairly universal.

Jacob stated that "the atonement satisfyeth the demands of his justice upon all those who have not the law given to them, that they are delivered from that awful monster, death and hell, and the devil, and the lake of fire and brimstone, which is endless torment" (2 Nephi 9:26; compare 9:20). In 2 Nephi 28:13, Nephi again utilizes this phraseology seemingly borrowed from Jacob to warn both those who are pacified and those who are angry with the truth that "they are grasped with . . . death, and hell; and the devil;" and all that have been seized therewith must stand before the throne of God, and be judged according to their works, from whence they must go into the place prepared for them, even a lake of fire and brimstone, which is endless torment." While Jacob employs these phrases to illustrate the majesty of the Savior's atonement, Nephi applies them differently—to warn those who are pacified and are "at ease in Zion . . . and are angry because of the truth of God" (vv. 24, 28).

In 2 Nephi 9:27-38, Jacob pronounces ten woes, or warnings, on the rich. John W. Welch sees this as significant, observing that Jacob's "ten woes' function as the equivalent of a contemporaneous Nephite set of ten commandments." There are several similarities between Jacob's woes and a series put forth by Nephi in 2 Nephi 28, including specific statements about "the rich" and those "who commit whoredoms" (compare 28:15; 9:30, 36).

Jacob capped his list of woes by stating, "And, in fine, wo unto all those who die in their sins; for they shall return to God, and behold his face, and remain in their sins" (2 Nephi 9:38). Nephi's final allusion to Jacob in 2 Nephi 28 may refer back to this tenth wo. Nephi states, "And in fine, wo unto all those who tremble, and are angry because of the truth of God" (2 Nephi 28:38). While the phrase in fine appears throughout the Book of Mormon, it is only combined with the word wo in 2 Nephi 9 and 28. Given the textual and conceptual similarities between Nephi's woes and Jacob's, it is possible that Nephi utilized the phrase and in fine, wo unto all those... as a merism in order to more comprehensively refer back to the woes stated previously by Jacob.

Jacob's sermon in 2 Nephi 9 is a stern one; it contains more references to hell than any other chapter in all of scripture. Thus it seems natural that when Nephi needed to sternly rebuke prideful people he would turn to this text. Rebuking others is never easy; perhaps by utilizing words similar to those of Jacob, Nephi was in a sense communicating to the people that his message was not his alone, but that of other prophets.

A key reason people quote from others is to bolster their authority for a particular position. But why would Nephi, the senior leader of the Nephites, quote from his younger brother? Nephi is already in a strong position and does not need Jacob to reinforce his words. In this instance, I believe Nephi used Jacob's words in order to prepare the people for the eventual transfer of ecclesiastical authority to Jacob. Just as an outgoing leader might quote from or praise an incoming leader in order to transfer some of that leader's power to the new leader, so too could Nephi have quoted from Jacob. By referring to Jacob's words, Nephi demonstrates the high regard he has for Jacob's teachings.

Jacob's Words and King Benjamin's Address

The likelihood that King Benjamin would have been interested in Jacob's words is easy to establish. Amuleki, the last writer on the small plates (which contained Jacob's words) delivered the small plates to King Benjamin (see Omni 1:25). To receive new records is certainly not a regular occurrence, and it seems probable that King Benjamin would have carefully studied them. But even if King Benjamin did not peruse the small plates, Jacob's words could have been recorded on the large plates.

Textual evidence suggests that King Benjamin's people could have been familiar with Jacob's words. King Benjamin tells his people, "ye . . . have been taught concerning the records which contain the prophecies which have been spoken by the holy prophets, even down to the time our father, Lehi, left Jerusalem; And also, all that has been spoken by our fathers until now" (Mosiah 3:14–35). But whether King Benjamin's people were familiar with Jacob or not, King Benjamin demonstrated that he was conversant with these words—at least ten times he echoes Jacob's words from 2 Nephi 9. These allusions are outlined in table 2; it is significant to note that none of the phrases are biblical, and all of the additional references within the Book of Mormon are post-Jacob and also could be references to Jacob's (or King Benjamin's) words.

Jacob had described a time when "this flesh must have laid down to rot and to crumble to in mother earth" (2 Nephi 9:7). While Jacob speaks of... mortality generally, King Benjamin uses Jacob's language to describe his own particular impending death. He states, "I am also of the dust. And ye behold that I am old, and am about to yield up this mortal frame to its mother earth" (Mosiah 2:26). The phrase mother earth\textsuperscript{14} appears only three times in all of scripture (see also Mormon 6:15). But King Benjamin does not simply lift the idea of a universal death with Jacob's unique phrase. Rather, he employs Jacob's phrase to emphasize that he, although a king, faces the same issues of mortality as everyone else.

During Jacob's important discourse on pride, he told them he had come to teach them "that I might rid my garments of your sins" (Jacob 2:2). This is not a biblical phrase, but appears for the first time in Jacob's speech. King Benjamin employs Jacob's words to explain that he has discharged his responsibility to teach his people and therefore cannot be held accountable for their sins. King Benjamin states, "I have caused that ye should assemble yourselves together that I might rid my garments of your blood" (Mosiah 2:28). While Jacob uses the word sins in Jacob 2:2, on another occasion he spoke of becoming rid of the blood of the people.\textsuperscript{15} It may be that Nephites saw blood and sin as related ideas; clearly these two words are connected in an Old Testament context (see, for example, Exodus 30:10 and Leviticus 4:25, 34). In any event, it is clear that both King Benjamin and Jacob wished to ensure they had clearly taught their people so they would not be held responsible for the people's sins.

In his tenth wo, Jacob declared, "And, in fine, wo unto all those who die in their sins; for they shall return to God, and behold his face, and remain in

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Allusion</th>
<th>Jacob's Words</th>
<th>King Benjamin's Words</th>
<th>Text</th>
<th>Times Exact Phrase Is Used Elsewhere in Scripture</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:7</td>
<td>Mosiah 2:26</td>
<td>its mother earth</td>
<td>0 (but Mormon 6:15 is very close)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>Jacob 2:2; cf. 2 Nephi 9:44</td>
<td>Mosiah 2:28</td>
<td>rid . . . garments</td>
<td>2 (Mormon 9:35; D&amp;C 61:34)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:38</td>
<td>Mosiah 2:33</td>
<td>wo . . . remaineth and dieth in . . . sins</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:16</td>
<td>Mosiah 2:38</td>
<td>whose flame ascendeth up forever and ever</td>
<td>1 (Alma 12:17)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:16</td>
<td>Mosiah 2:27</td>
<td>and their torment is as a lake of fire and brimstone</td>
<td>0 (but Alma 12:17 is very similar)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:24</td>
<td>Mosiah 2:41</td>
<td>to the end . . . the Lord God hath spoken it</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:39</td>
<td>Mosiah 3:19</td>
<td>yeilds to the enticings</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:40</td>
<td>Mosiah 4:11</td>
<td>remember . . . the greatness of God</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:42</td>
<td>Mosiah 4:11</td>
<td>in the depths of humility</td>
<td>2 (Mosiah 21:14; Alma 62:41)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:30</td>
<td>Mosiah 4:23</td>
<td>who are rich as . . . to the things of this world.</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
mortality generally, King Benjamin uses Jacob's language to describe his own particular impending death. He states, "I am also of the dust. And ye behold that I am old, and am about to yield up this mortal frame to its mother earth" (Mosiah 2:26). The phrase mother earth\(^\text{14}\) appears only three times in all of scripture (see also Mormon 6:15). But King Benjamin does not simply lift the idea of a universal death with Jacob's unique phrase. Rather, he employs Jacob's phrase to emphasize that he, although a king, faces the same issues of mortality as everyone else.

During Jacob's important discourse on pride, he told them he had come to teach them "that I might rid my garments of your sins" (Jacob 2:2). This is not a biblical phrase, but appears for the first time in Jacob's speech. King Benjamin employs Jacob's words to explain that he has discharged his responsibility to teach his people and therefore cannot be held accountable for their sins. King Benjamin states, "I have caused that ye should assemble yourselves together that I might rid my garments of your blood" (Mosiah 2:28). While Jacob uses the word sin in Jacob 2:2, on another occasion he spoke of becoming rid of the blood of the people.\(^{15}\) It may be that Nephi's saw blood and sin as related ideas; clearly these two words are connected in an Old Testament context (see, for example, Exodus 30:10 and Leviticus 4:25, 31). In any event, it is clear that both King Benjamin and Jacob wished to ensure they had clearly taught their people so they would not be held responsible for the people's sins.

In his tenth wo, Jacob declared, "And, in fine, wo unto all those who die in their sins, for they shall return to God, and behold his face, and remain in their sins" (2 Nephi 9:38). No other scriptural passages repeat these phrases exactly this way. But King Benjamin appears to refer to this wo, saying, "There is a wo pronounced upon him who listeth to obey that spirit; for if he listeth to obey him, and remaineth and dieth in his sins the same drinketh damnation to his own soul" (Mosiah 2:33). Note that King Benjamin refers to a wo that had been previously issued. Jacob speaks about people remaining and dying in their sins, while King Benjamin reverses the order of these two words. Why would King Benjamin reverse the order? One possibility is that it is a manifestation of Seidel's law, in which later authors, when quoting from previous ones, reverse the order of some or all of the previous material to indicate their dependence on the previous author.\(^{16}\)

King Benjamin's allusions to Jacob's words in 2 Nephi 9

Yielding to the devil's enticings leads to death. Both Jacob and Benjamin speak of yielding to enticings. . . . Thus everyone is enticed; yielding to the enticings of the Spirit leads to becoming a saint.

end they are received into heaven, that thereby they may dwell with God in a state of never-ending happiness. O remember, remember that these things are true; for the Lord God hath spoken it" (Mosiah 9:16). By using antonyms, King Benjamin may have been juxtaposing the happiness that awaits the righteous with the damnation Jacob spoke of that awaits those who do not repent. Where King Benjamin speaks of the righteous, Jacob speaks of those who will "not repent." King Benjamin refers to those who "hold out faithful to the end," while Jacob talks about those who will "not . . . endure to the end." King Benjamin speaks of "a state of never-ending happiness" in contrast to Jacob's reference to the "damned." A second example of what appears to be textual contrasting involves two key words: yield and entice. While yield and its variants occur ninety-nine times in the scriptures and entice twenty-three times, these two words only appear together in 2 Nephi 9:39 and Mosiah 3:19. Jacob teaches, "Remember . . . the awfulness of yielding to the enticings of that cunning one" (2 Nephi 9:39). In contrast, King Benjamin\(^{19}\) explains, "For the natural man is an enemy to God, and has been from the fall of Adam, and will be, forever and ever, unless he yields to the enticings of the Holy Spirit, and putteth off the natural man and becometh a saint through the atonement of Christ the Lord" (Mosiah 3:19). By yielding to the enticings of the Holy Spirit, one can overcome the natural man.

Jacob taught that yielding to the devil's enticings leads to death. Both Jacob and Benjamin speak of yielding to enticings. Lehi had previously taught that "man could not act for himself save it should be that he was enticed by the one or the other" (2 Nephi 2:16).
Thus everyone is enticed; yielding to the enticings of the Spirit leads to becoming a saint. Yielding to the enticings of Satan leads to death. Jacob refers to the “awfulness” of yielding to the devil, while Benjamin employs words and phrases such as patient and full of love in connection with yielding to the Spirit.

Benjamin extends Jacob’s statement in one important sense. Jacob says that we receive death if we yield to the devil. Benjamin teaches that we will forever be enemies to God unless we yield to the enticings of the Spirit. So it is not enough to avoid the enticings of the devil; we must proactively yield to the enticings of the Spirit. Thus Benjamin turns Jacob’s statement about the awful consequences of yielding to the enticings of the devil into a positive statement about yielding to the enticings of the Spirit.

The differences in audience may drive the different ways in which Jacob and King Benjamin teach these concepts. Jacob speaks to a people who appear to be seriously struggling with sin (see 2 Nephi 9:46–48). He is warning a group of people who are making bad choices. In contrast, King Benjamin is addressing individuals prepared to take upon them the name of Christ (see Mosiah 5:7). Thus King Benjamin focuses on being preventive, affirming that if his people continue to yield to the enticings of the Holy Spirit, they will become like Christ.

Benjamin echoes not only the sterner portions of Jacob’s message but also those pertaining to the atonement’s reach to those who know not the law.

Jacob told his people to “remember the greatness of the Holy One of Israel” and states that those who “come down in the depths of humility” will receive answers to their prayers (2 Nephi 9:40, 42). As King Benjamin explains to his people how they can avoid the lake of fire and retain a remission of their sins, he exhorts them to “remember, and always retain in remembrance, the greatness of God, and . . . humble yourselves even in the depths of humility, calling on the name of the Lord daily” (Mosiah 4:11). In these cases, echoing Jacob could provide a familiar feel to the words King Benjamin is speaking.

King Benjamin later refers to another of Jacob’s woes. Jacob had stated, “Wo unto the rich, who are rich as to the things of the world” (2 Nephi 9:30). Many prophets have had to struggle against the effects of wealth among the people. Yet King Benjamin not only describes the same problem, but he also uses words that tightly link to Jacob’s: “Wo be unto that man, for his substance shall perish with him; and now, I say these things unto those who are rich as pertaining to the things of this world” (Mosiah 4:23). King Benjamin follows Jacob’s clarification about riches in terms of worldly as opposed to heavenly riches.

In addition to the textual allusions noted above, additional echoes, while lacking specific textual similarities, demonstrate important doctrinal parallels between 2 Nephi 9 and Mosiah 2–5. Jacob was the first Book of Mormon prophet to explicitly teach that “the atonement satisfieth the demands of his justice upon all those who have not the law given to them” (2 Nephi 9:26). This doctrine is not stated before or after in the Book of Mormon until King Benjamin states that Christ’s “blood atoneth for the sins of those . . . who have died not knowing the will of God concerning them” (Mosiah 3:11). Thus Benjamin echoes not only the sterner portions of Jacob’s message but also those pertaining to the atonement’s reach to those who know not the law.

The correlation between the discourses of Jacob and King Benjamin on this theologically important point—redemption for those who had not received the law—is strengthened when we see that in these two cases, after teaching this principle, both Jacob and Benjamin provide a warning for those who know better. Jacob asserts, “Wo unto him that has the law given, yea, that has all the commandments of God, like unto us, and that transgresseth them, and that wasteth the days of his probation, for awful is his state!” (2 Nephi 9:27). Similarly, King Benjamin says, “But wo, wo unto him who knoweth that he rebelleth against God! For salvation cometh to none such except it be through repentance and faith on the Lord Jesus Christ” (Mosiah 3:12).

From the foregoing, it is evident that King Benjamin employed Jacob’s teachings in crafting his speech. In a modern setting regarding academic studies, Nigel Gilbert argued that researchers utilize the words and findings of others in order to “persuade readers of the validity and significance of [their] arguments.” It seems probable that a similar function is at work with King Benjamin. The multiple similarities between King Benjamin’s words and Jacob’s
Thus everyone is enticed; yielding to the enticings of the Spirit leads to becoming a saint. Yielding to the enticings of Satan leads to death. Jacob refers to the “awfulness” of yielding to the devil, while Benjamin employs words and phrases such as “patient and full of love in connection with yielding to the Spirit.”

Benjamin extends Jacob’s statement in one important sense. Jacob says that we receive death if we yield to the devil. Benjamin teaches that we will forever be enemies to God unless we yield to the enticings of the Spirit. So it is not enough to avoid the enticings of the devil, we must proactively yield to the enticings of the Spirit. Thus Benjamin turns Jacob’s statement about the awful consequences of yielding to the enticings of the devil into a positive statement about yielding to the enticings of the Spirit. The differences in audience may drive the different ways in which Jacob and King Benjamin teach these concepts. Jacob speaks to a people who appear to be seriously struggling with sin (see 2 Nephi 9:46-48). He is warning a group of people who are making bad choices. In contrast, King Benjamin is addressing individuals prepared to take upon them the name of Christ (see Mosiah 5:7). Thus King Benjamin focuses on being preventative, affirming that if his people continue to yield to the enticings of the Holy Spirit, they will become like Christ.

Benjamin echoes not only the stern portions of Jacob’s message but also those pertaining to the atonement’s reach to those who know not the law.

Jacob told his people to “remember the greatness of the Holy One of Israel” and states that those who “come down in the depths of humility” will receive answers to their prayers (2 Nephi 9:40, 42). As King Benjamin explains to his people how they can avoid the lake of fire and retain a remission of their sins, Benjamin echoes similar sentiments: “They that yield to the enticings of the devil into a positive sense; we must proactively yield to the enticings of the Spirit.”

The correlation between the discourses of Jacob and King Benjamin on this theologically important point—redemption for those who had not received the law—is strengthened when we see that in these two cases, after teaching this principle, both Jacob and Benjamin provide a warning for those who know better. Jacob asserts, “Wo unto him that has the law given, yea, that has all the commandments of God, like unto us, and that transgresseth them, and that wasteth the days of his probation, for awful is his state!” (2 Nephi 9:27). Similarly, King Benjamin says, “But wo, wo unto him who knoweth that he rebelleth against God! For salvation cometh to none such except it be through repentance and faith on the Lord Jesus Christ” (Mosiah 3:12).

From the foregoing, it is evident that King Benjamin echoes Jacob’s teachings in crafting his speech. In a modern setting regarding academic studies, Nigel Gilbert argued that researchers utilize the words and findings of others in order to “persuade readers of the validity and significance of [their] arguments.” It seems probable that a similar function is at work with King Benjamin. The multiple similarities between King Benjamin’s words and Jacob’s indicate that Jacob was viewed by King Benjamin and his people as an authoritative source.

Jacob and Moroni

Moroni, the final author of the Book of Mormon, frequently employs words that tightly link to Jacob’s: “Wo be unto that man, for his substance shall perish with him; and he that despiseth the commandments of God, and doth not believe in the words of his prophets, shall be cut off from the presence of the Lord; and he shall be doomed to destruction forever” (Mosiah 2:17). Moroni follows Jacob in outlining a series of deaths—death, resurrection, and final judgment. Moroni intentionally provides modern-day readers with these echoes to help modern-day readers, asking, “Why do ye adorn yourselves with that which hath no life, and yet suffer the hungry, and to liberate the captive, and administer relief to the sick and the afflicted” (Jacob 2:19). Moroni uses Jacob’s words to chastise future readers, asking, “Why do ye adorn yourselves with that which hath no life, and yet suffer the hungry, and to liberate the captive, and administer relief to the sick and the afflicted” (Jacob 2:19).

Table 3. Moroni’s allusions to Jacob’s Words

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Allusion</th>
<th>Jacob’s Words</th>
<th>Moroni’s Words</th>
<th>Text</th>
<th>Times Exact Phrase Is Used Elsewhere in Scripture</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>Jacob 2:19</td>
<td>Mormon 8:39; cf. 17</td>
<td>the naked, and the sick and the afflicted</td>
<td>0 (but Alma 14:28 is nearly identical)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>Jacob 3:8</td>
<td>Mormon 9:2, 5</td>
<td>when ye shall be brought . . . before . . . God</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:15</td>
<td>Mormon 9:14</td>
<td>and then cometh the judgment</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:16</td>
<td>Mormon 9:14</td>
<td>filthy shall be filthy still . . . righteous shall be righteous still</td>
<td>0 (but Revelation 22:11 is very similar)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>Jacob 4:9</td>
<td>Mormon 9:17</td>
<td>by the power of his word man</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:9</td>
<td>Ether 8:25</td>
<td>who beguiled our first parents</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:38</td>
<td>Moroni 10:26</td>
<td>wo . . . die in their sins</td>
<td>0 (Mosiah 2:33)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>2 Nephi 9:23</td>
<td>Moroni 10:34</td>
<td>the paradise of God . . . spirit . . . body</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9</td>
<td>Jacob 6:13</td>
<td>Moroni 10:34</td>
<td>meet you before the pleasing bar</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Day readers are similar to former-day Nephiites. Perhaps Moroni wanted us to see that Jacob’s counsel regarding riches still applies.

Jacob also discussed the dread that would come to those who had to stand before God in their sins. He said, “O my brethren, I fear that unless ye shall repent of your sins that their skins will be abased than yours, when ye shall be brought with them before the throne of God” (Jacob 3:8). Moroni similarly stated, “When ye shall be brought to see your nakedness before God . . . it will kindle a flame of unquenchable fire upon you. O then . . . cry mightily unto the Father in the name of Jesus, that perhaps ye may be found spotless, pure, and white” (Mormon 9:5-6). Moroni’s reversal of being brought and whiteness may be a manifestation of Seidel’s law, which, as described earlier, can signal a quotation. Moroni also expands on Jacob’s words to make clear that the issue is not skin color, but purity.

Moroni follows Jacob in outlining a series of events—death, resurrection, and final judgment.
Table 4 demonstrates how multiple relationships (both conceptual and textual) within two verses appear between Moroni’s words and Jacob’s.

Both prophets testify that because of Christ all men will be resurrected and “then cometh the judgment.” Just prior to this passage, Jacob says, “we shall have a perfect knowledge of all our guilt, and our uncleanness, and our nakedness” (2 Nephi 9:14). Similarly, Moroni states that we “shall be brought to see [our] nakedness before God” (Mormon 9:5). Both Jacob and Moroni teach that the judgment will be a restoration of what we already are.25 By employing Jacob’s vivid phraseology, Moroni adds a second witness to his own and shifts Jacob’s testimony forward in time, reiterating its relevance to modern readers. Jacob spoke to a hardened people; it may be that Moroni saw in his latter-day readers those who similarly struggled and thus employed Jacob’s words in reaching out to them.

As Moroni turns his attention toward the miraculous power of God, he again alludes to Jacob’s teachings. Moroni uses Jacob’s teachings and the power of God to illustrate that miracles can continue in the present time. Table 5 illustrates several connections between Moroni’s words and Jacob’s.

Jacob spoke of God’s power in creating the earth (Jacob 4:9) in order to persuade readers to “despise not the revelations of God” (Jacob 4:8). In the pericope surrounding the passages quoted in table 5, Jacob specifically was concerned with those who sought to counsel God, thinking that they knew better than deity. Moreover, Jacob referenced Jews who “despised the words of plainness” (Jacob 4:14). In the nearby verses, Moroni followed Jacob’s pattern (both thematically and textually), encouraging readers to “despise not . . . but hearken unto the words of the Lord” (Mormon 9:27).26 Both Moroni and Jacob teach that God’s might compels us to humble ourselves and take counsel from his hand (see Jacob 4:10, compare Mormon 9:27). While Jacob looked backwards at the Jews as a “stiffnecked people” (Jacob 4:14), Moroni looked forward and saw the people of the latter days

---

Table 4. Relationships between 2 Nephi 9:15–16 and Mormon 9:13–14

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>2 Nephi 9:15–16</th>
<th>Mormon 9:13–14</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>And it shall come to pass that when all men shall have passed from this first death unto life, insomuch as they have become immortal, they must appear before the judgment-seat of the Holy One of Israel; and then cometh the judgment . . .</td>
<td>The death of Christ . . . bringeth to pass a redemption from an endless sleep, from which sleep all men shall be awakened by the power of God when the trump shall sound; and they shall come forth, both small and great, and all shall stand before his bar . . .</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>And then must they be judged according to the holy judgment of God. And . . . they who are righteous shall be righteous still, and they who are filthy shall be filthy still.</td>
<td>And then cometh the judgment of the Holy One upon them; and then cometh the time that he that is filthy shall be filthy still; and he that is righteous shall be righteous still.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Table 5. Relationships between Jacob 4:9 and Mormon 9:17

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Jacob 4:9</th>
<th>Mormon 9:17</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>For behold, by the power of his word man came upon the face of the earth, which earth was created by the power of his word. Wherefore, if God being able to speak and the world was, and to speak and man was created, O then, why not able to command the earth, or the workmanship of his hands upon the face of it, according to his will and pleasure?</td>
<td>Who shall say that it was not a miracle that by his word the heaven and the earth should be; and by the power of his word man was created of the dust of the earth; and by the power of his word have miracles been wrought?</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Table 4 demonstrates how multiple relationships (both conceptual and textual) within two verses appear between Moroni’s words and Jacob’s.

Both prophets testify that because of Christ all men will be resurrected and “then cometh the judgment” (2 Nephi 9:13–14). Similarly, Moroni states that we “shall be brought to see [our] nakedness before God” (Mormon 9:9). Both Jacob and Moroni teach that the judgment will be a restoration of what we already are.38 By employing Jacob’s vivid phraseology, Moroni adds a second witness to his own and shifts Jacob’s testimony forward in time, reiterating its relevance to modern readers. Jacob spoke to a hardened people; it may be that Moroni saw in his latter-day readers those who similarly struggled and thus employed Jacob’s words in reaching out to them.

As Moroni turns his attention toward the miraculous power of God, he again alludes to Jacob’s teachings. Moroni uses Jacob’s teachings and the power of God to illustrate that miracles can continue in the present time. Table 5 illustrates several connections between Moroni’s words and Jacob’s.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Table 4: Relationships between 2 Nephi 9:15-16 and Mormon 9:13-14</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2 Nephi 9:15-16</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>And it shall come to pass that when all men shall have passed from this first death unto life, insomuch as they have become immortal, they must appear before the judgment-seat of the Holy One of Israel; and then cometh the judgment. . . . And then must they be judged according to the holy judgment of God. And . . . they who are righteous shall be righteous still, and they who are filthy shall be filthy still.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Table 5: Relationships between Jacob 4:9 and Mormon 9:17

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Table 5: Relationships between Jacob 4:9 and Mormon 9:17</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Jacob 4:9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>For behold, by the power of his word man came upon the face of the earth, which earth was created by the power of his word. Wherefore, if God being able to speak and the word was, and to speak and man was created. O then, why not able to command the earth, or the workmanship of his hands upon the face of it, according to his will and pleasure?</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

(see Mormon 8:35). Moroni utilizes Jacob’s words in order to urge modern-day readers to avoid the mistakes spoken of by Jacob.

Jacob was the first Book of Mormon author to speak of secret combinations. He stated that the wicked “become devils, angels to a devil, to be shut out from the presence of our God, and to remain with the father of lies, in misery, like unto himself; yea, to that being who beguiled our first parents, who transfrometh himself high unto an angel of light, and stirreth up the children of men unto secret combinations of murder” (2 Nephi 9:9). Jacob speaks of secret combinations in terms of evidence of Satan’s degree of depravity. Jacob points out that were it not for Christ, all mankind would be under the rule of the devil, the founder of secret combinations. As Moroni warns latter-day readers of the evils of secret combinations, he echoes Jacob’s phrases. Moroni states that “secret combinations” are “built up by the devil, who is the father of all lies;” even that same liar who beguiled our first parents, yea, even that same liar who hath caused man to commit murder from the beginning (Ether 8:24-25).

Moroni introduces the concept of secret combinations as he discusses the story of Akish and the daughter of Jared. Perhaps Moroni alludes to Jacob’s stern words in order to highlight the wickedness of Akish and his followers. While Jacob taught about the general theory of secret combinations, Moroni provided a specific example. Employing Jacob’s words provides a literary connection between Jacob’s global discussion of secret combinations and the specific instance that Moroni described. Moreover, it provides an important warning to modern readers. Jacob’s words regarding secret combinations include the context of dwelling eternally with Satan. Moroni thus warns modern readers of the serious consequences of participating in secret combinations.

Three final allusions to Jacob appear in Moroni’s last words. As stated previously, Jacob’s tenth wo was “and, in fine, so unto all those who die in their sins; for they shall return to God, and behold his face, and remain in their sins” (2 Nephi 9:38). Moroni similarly writes, “We unto them who shall do these things away and die, for they die in their sins, and they cannot be saved” (Mormon 10:26). As with Nephi and King Benjamin, Moroni alludes to the tenth of Jacob’s ten woes; this may be a merism, reminding readers of all ten. As mentioned earlier in this paper, it may be that Jacob’s woes have become a traditional Nephite expression. It seems as if Moroni is quoting Jacob as both an authoritative and traditional source.

Speaking of death and resurrection generally, Jacob had taught, “O how great the plans of our God! For on the other hand, the paradise of God must be prepared for the deliver up the spirits of the righteous, and the grave deliver up the body of the righteous; and the spirit and the body is restored to itself again” (2 Nephi 9:13). In his final verse, Moroni says, “And now I bid unto all, farewell. I soon go to rest in the paradise of God, until my spirit and body shall again reunite” (Mormon 10:34). Moroni’s imminent death must have made these words from Jacob increasingly relevant. I envision Moroni finding comfort in Jacob’s words as he faces the prospect of his own mortality.

One last allusion to Jacob’s words is found in Moroni’s final phrase. Jacob bade farewell to readers by saying, “I shall meet you before the pleasing bar of God . . . Amen” (Jacob 6:31). Moroni says, “I will meet you before the pleasing bar of the great Jehovah . . . Amen” (Mormon 10:34). The phrase pleasing bar appears only in these two scriptures and nowhere else in English literature. Therefore it has been the subject of intense debate. In essence, Royal Skousen has argued that this phrase should be emended to read the pleading bar, while John S. Welch rejects this claim. However, for my present purposes, it perhaps matters less whether it is a pleasing or pleading bar of God; the point is that in either case Moroni and Jacob both use a phrase that appears nowhere else. In this case, Moroni does not change Jacob’s context—this is a situation in which two righteous men speak of judgment and how they will meet us at that day.

Note that Moroni echoes Jacob twice in his final words. As I have stated thus far, Moroni may be establishing the authority of Jacob’s words and commending them to future readers. In addition, I believe that Moroni felt a special relationship with Jacob. Just as Jacob seemed to stand in the shadow of his priesthood leader and older brother Nephi, perhaps Moroni felt inadequate compared to Mormon and looked to Jacob for guidance on how to play the role of the junior author. Moreover, Moroni likely identified with Jacob’s words in Jacob 7:25—“We being a lonesome and a solemn people, wanderers, cast out from Jerusalem, born in tribulation, in a wilderness, and hated of our brethren”—in ways that Jacob might not have fully foreseen.

Grant Hardy, who has noted Moroni’s propensity to quote from previous prophets (not just Jacob), makes an argument regarding Moroni’s reasons for alluding to other prophets that could be applied specifically to his echoes of Jacob. Hardy declares, “By employing the words of others, Moroni shifts the notion of authorship and makes himself the self-effacing inheritor, or spokesman, for an entire literary tradition. He is able to appeal to the authority of past prophets and record keepers (while at the same time reinforcing the respect due them).”

It would seem, then, that by frequently quoting from Jacob, Moroni more fully moves Jacob’s words into the consciousness of modern readers. Jacob originally spoke to the Nephites, and it isn’t clear that his words were specifically intended for the present day. But by using phrases such as the treated and . . . the sick and the afflicted, the righteous shall be righteous still, . . . [and the] filthy shall be filthy still, Moroni applies images from the sermons in Jacob 2 and 2 Nephi 9 directly to latter-day readers. It may be that those consistent echoes are Moroni’s way of urging his readers to go back to the beginning and read Jacob’s words more carefully. Thus Moroni utilizes them not only to establish his authority but to demonstrate the authoritative nature of Jacob’s words to modern-day readers.

Conclusion

Throughout this article I have demonstrated multiple textual similarities between Jacob’s words and those of other Nephite prophets. These layers of intertextuality may add insight into the transmission and translation processes. Royal Skousen has argued that the “consistency of phraseology in the original text” provides “substantial evidence within the text itself for tight control over specific words, phrases, and sentences of English.” Precise textual matches between Jacob and Nephi, King Benjamin, and Moroni may indicate intentionality in the specific English words used in the translation of the Book of Mormon.

Moreover these textual connections establish Jacob as a key figure in the Book of Mormon and illustrate that his words had a lasting impact—not only in their original form, but also in how later Book of Mormon prophets echoed his words. Jacob’s stern address in 2 Nephi 9, including phrases such as their torment is as a lake of fire and brimstone, is later alluded to by Nephi, King Benjamin, and Moroni, suggesting that they had become a well-known feature of Nephite theological discourse.

Jacob’s words are not simply used as filler. Those who echo his words appear to do so for their own purposes. Nephi used Jacob’s words to underscore the serious consequences of sin. He may also have emphasized Jacob’s words to pave the way for Jacob’s succession as the spiritual leader of his people and to provide a second witness for his teachings. King Benjamin appears to have employed Jacob’s words to provide both doctrinal and structural underpinnings for his address. It may be that he saw similarities between the needs of his audience and those originally addressed by Jacob. Moroni frequently quotes from Jacob, perhaps out of feelings of a shared but not identical circumstance, and also with a desire to shift Jacob’s words forward in time, urging us to carefully return to Jacob’s words.

In this article I have focused on Jacob’s textual legacy in terms of how Nephi, King Benjamin, and Moroni relied on his words, but they are not the only ones who employed Jacob’s phrases. Taken together, these multiple allusions to Jacob suggest that his words were well-known and used among the Nephites for centuries after his death, likely demonstrating that he was viewed as an authoritative source. This study underscores the fact that, while often standing in Nephi’s shadow, Jacob was a powerful literary figure in his own right. His words influenced not only future generations of modern readers, but also the prophets and people of his own dispensation.

1. See Robert L. Millet, “The Vision of the Redemption of the Dead (D&C 138),” in Sperry Symposium Classics: The Doctrine and Covenants, ed. Craig K. Mancill (Provo, UT: BYU Religious Studies Center, 2004), 314–31. Millet also points out that while these revelations were initially added to the Pearl of Great Price, they were, in 1979, moved to the Doctrine and Covenants.

3. Determining whether a phrase is uniquely Jacobean is not necessarily an easy task. Biblical scholars have put forth various ideas about how to tell whether any two texts are connected. In his classic work, Echoes of Scripture in the Letters of Paul, Richard B. Hays provides seven criteria that can be used to distinguish between real and illusory allusions: “(1) Availability. Was the proposed source of the echo available to the author and/or original readers? (2) Volume. The volume of an echo is determined primarily by the degree of explicit repetition of words or syntactical patterns. . . . (3) Recurrence. How often does [the author] elsewhere cite or allude to the same scriptural passage? (4) Thematic Coherence. How well does the alleged echo fit into the line of argument that [the author] is developing? (5) Historical Plausibility. Could [the author] have intended the alleged meaning? (6) History of Interpretation. Have other readers, both critical and pre-critical, heard the same echoes? (7) Satisfaction. With or without clear confirmation from the other criteria listed here, does the proposed reading make sense?” Hays, Echoes of Scripture in the Letters of Paul (New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 1993), 29–31.

4. For additional information on Jacob’s literary legacy, see John S. Tanner, “Jacob and His Descendants as Authors,” in Rediscovering the Book of Mormon, ed. John L. Sorenson and Melvin J. Thorne (Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1991), 59; and John A. Tvedtines, “The Influence of Lehi’s Admonitions on the Teachings of His Son Jacob,” Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 3/2 (1994): 35. The present article deals with allusions made by Nephi, King Benjamin, and Moroni. These are not the only prophets who share a connection with Jacob. For example, Joseph M. Spencer points out connections between Jacob and Abinadi, stating, “Abinadi is Jacob’s unquestionable doctrinal heir.” Spencer, An Other Testament: On Typology (Salem, OR: Salt Press, 2012), 134. Samuel the Lamanite and Amulek both draw on Jacob (and others) in their speeches, a topic I will explore on another occasion.

5. In making this assertion, I assume that the passages in the Book of Mormon can correctly be attributed to the person recorded as having given them. Admittedly, it is possible such passages were originally said by somebody else. For example, S. Kent Brown asserts that Jacob and Nephi used Lehi’s words in their teachings. Brown, “Lehi’s

6. Nephi explicitly tells us that he is quoting from Jacob in 2 Nephi 6:10 (see 2 Nephi 6:1).

10. A merism is a statement in which one key phrase can be employed to represent a longer statement. For example, in a general conference address, President Dieter F. Uchtdorf said, “Our second key relationship is with our families. Since ‘no other success can compensate for failure’ here, we must place high priority on our families” (“Of Things That
John Hilton III is an assistant professor of ancient scripture at Brigham Young University. He has a master’s degree from Harvard and a PhD from BYU, both in education. He has written several nonfiction books, including The Little Book of Mormon Music. Besides hanging out with his family, his favorite hobbies are reading, writing, and learning Chinese.

NOTES
1. See Robert L. Millet, “The Vision of the Redemption of the Dead” (D&amp;C 187), in Sperry Symposium Classics: The Doctrine and Covenants, ed. Craig R. Manoell (Provo, UT: BYU Religious Studies Center, 2004), 214–21. Millet also points out that while these revelations were initially added to the Pearl of Great Price, they were, in 1879, moved to the Doctrine and Covenants.

3. Determining whether a phrase is uniquely Jacobean is not necessarily an easy task. Biblical scholars have put forth various ideas about how to tell if a phrase is unique and connected. In his classic work, Echoes of Scripture in the Letters of Paul, Richard B. Hays provides several criteria that can be used to distinguish between real and illusory allusions: (1) Availability. Was the proposed source of the echo available to the author and/or original readers? (2) Volume. The volume of an echo is determined primarily by the degree of explicit repetition of words or syntax found in any given text. (3) Coincidence. How often does [the author] otherwise cite or allude to the same source? (4) Thematic Coherence. Do similar themes or disciplinal matters in the proposed reading make sense? (5) Historical Plausibility. Could [the author] have intended the alleged source as an echo or inspiration? (6) History of Interpretation. Have other readers, both author and/or original readers? (2) Volume. The volume of an echo is determined primarily by the degree of explicit repetition of words or syntax found in any given text. (3) Coincidence. How often does [the author] otherwise cite or allude to the same source? (4) Thematic Coherence. Do similar themes or disciplinal matters in the proposed reading make sense? (5) Historical Plausibility. Could [the author] have intended the alleged source as an echo or inspiration? (6) History of Interpretation. Have other readers, both author and/or original readers?

4. For additional information on Jacob’s literary legacy, see John S. Tanner, “Jacob and His Descendants as Authors,” in Rediscovering the Book of Mormon, ed. John L. Sorenson and Melvin J. Thorne (Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1992), 59, and John A. Tvedt, “The Influence of Lehi’s Authorship on the Teachings of His Son Jacob,” Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 3/2 (1994): 23. The present article deals with allusions made by Nephi, King Benjamin, and Moroni. These are not the only prophets who share a connection with Jacob. For example, Joseph M. Spencer points out connections between Jacob and Abinadi, stating, “Abinadi is Jacob’s unambiguous doctrinal echo.” Spencer, An Other Testament: On Typology (Salt Lake City, UT: Deseret Book, 2013), 9. There are no real prophetic allusions between Jacob and King Josiah, but a textual parallel does exist between Jacob’s phrase and the book of Luke 6:12, indicating a possible statistical connection between the chapters. In addition, only one chapter in all scripture (Alma 12) has as many references to death. For more information on the use of the word hell in the Book of Mormon, see Larry E. D. Johnson, “The Concept of Hell” in A Book of Mormon Treasury: Gospel Insights from General Authorities and Religious Educators (Provo, UT: BYU Religious Studies Center, 2003), 262–79.

5. Several scholars have suggested that Joseph Smith translated 1 Nephi’s Omnipotence last. If this is the case, Jacob’s words in Jacob, in 2 Nephi 9–10, and Joseph’s words in 2 Nephi 28 are in almost every possible aspect to 2 Nephi 9. Aside from utilizing Jacob as an authoritative source, why might Jacob’s words in 2 Nephi 9–10 have particular interest to King Benjamin? Welch has written that 2 Nephi omits Joseph Smith’s original Hebrew, which was to be replaced with Joseph Smith’s translation. The translation of the order in which they were translated. This, coupled with the evidence that Joseph Smith never referred to notes or what he had previously translated, indicates that Jacob’s original Hebrew integrity that would have been impossible for Joseph to create out of thin air. Jacob 1:11. The present book of the Book of Mormon reads, “They are given them for a record, an eye to hell, and death, and death, and hell, and the devil . . .” For Skousen’s discussion of his conjectural emendation, see his Analysis of Textual Variants of the Book of Mormon, Part Two: A Nephi–Mosiah 6 (Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 2008), 873–74.

6. A Marxist is a statement in which one key phrase can be employed to represent a longer statute. For instance, in a general conference address, President Dieter F. Uchtdorf said, “Jacob shook his garments before the people, saying, ‘I shook your iniquities from my garments, and am rid of your blood’” (2 Nephi 9:44). Welch stated that “repetition in the opposite order of the original is thought by scholars to be a strong sign . . .” In a conscious form of quotation.” John W. Welch, “Echoes from Sermon on the Mount,” in The Seven Days of Creation in the First Day of Creation: The 30th Annual Brigham Young University Sidney B. Sperry Symposium, ed. Gaye Strathearn, Thomas A. Waymouth, and Daniel L. Belnap (Provo, UT: BYU Religious Studies Center, 2009), 314–34. The exact circumstances of Jacob’s address in 2 Nephi 6–10 are unknown, but Grant Gardner speculates that Jacob was teaching a combined group of people, some of whom were Nephites, others who were indigeneous people with whom the Nephites had come in contact. See Gardner, Second Witness: Analyti- cal and Critical Essays, 161–213. The words fire and brimstone occur in various pericopes, the connections between Jacob and King Benjamin are much stronger than those between King Benjamin and (for example) the book of Revela- tion. Note that both Jacob and King Benjamin speak of flame (flame) as sending upon forever and ever, a textual phrase not found in the Bible. The phrase ends with torment occurs seven times in the Book of Mormon and once in the Doctrine and Coven- nants. Jacob is the first to utilize this phrase; perhaps when the Lord says “it is written endless torment” (D&amp;C 49:6), he refers to Jacob.

7. At this point in the text, King Benja- min may be quoting the angel who spoke to him in 1 Nephi 2:24. For Skousen’s discussion of his conjectural emendation, see his Analysis of Textual Variants of the Book of Mormon, Part Two: A Nephi–Mosiah 6 (Provo, UT: Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies, 2008), 873–74.

11. While the words torrent, fire, and brimstone appear in various pericopes, the connections between Jacob and King Benjamin are much stronger than those between King Benjamin and (for example) the book of Revela- tion. Note that both Jacob and King Benjamin speak of flame (flame) as sending upon forever and ever, a textual phrase not found in the Bible. The phrase ends with torment occurs seven times in the Book of Mormon and once in the Doctrine and Coven- nants. Jacob is the first to utilize this phrase; perhaps when the Lord says “it is written endless torment” (D&amp;C 49:6), he refers to Jacob.