2-1-2012

Announcements

Journal of East Asian Libraries

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/jeal

BYU ScholarsArchive Citation
Available at: https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/jeal/vol2012/iss154/11

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in Journal of East Asian Libraries by an authorized editor of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact scholarsarchive@byu.edu, ellen_amatangelo@byu.edu.
ANNOUNCEMENTS

Stanford East Asia Library Recruits Japanese Studies Librarian
The Stanford University Libraries invite applications and nominations internationally for the position of Japanese Studies Librarian. Librarians or scholars with a strong background in collection management and Japanese studies are encouraged to apply.

Under the supervision of the Director of the East Asia Library, the Japanese Studies Librarian will manage Japanese language materials, primarily in the humanities and social sciences, and will provide reference and bibliographic services to faculty and students. The Japanese Studies Librarian should have high proficiency in Japanese language and deep understanding of Japanese culture, and bring to this position a thorough comprehension of all aspects of current research in Japanese Studies, including the use of a wide range of print and digital resources for Japanese studies.

East Asian Studies is an established and important area of international study at Stanford University. The individual hired for this position will have the opportunity to contribute to the East Asia Library’s support of students and faculty who are engaged in this area of study and research.

For more information, please visit: http://jobs.stanford.edu/find_a_job.html

Rosenberg Institute Occasional Paper, No. 1
The Barbara and Richard M. Rosenberg Institute for East Asian Studies at Suffolk University, Boston is pleased to announce publication of the Rosenberg Institute Occasional Paper Number 1:

Public Medicine in Wartime China: Biomedicine, State Medicine, and the Rise of China’s National Medical Colleges, 1931-1945. By John R. Watt, PhD. With a Preface by Caroline Reeves, PhD.

Dr. Watt is an established scholar in the field of Chinese Studies. His book The District Magistrate in Late Imperial China (Columbia University Press, 1972) continues to be cited. He has also published Health Care and National Development in Taiwan, 1950-2000 (American Bureau for Medical Advancement in China, 2008), and currently serves as Vice-President for the American Bureau of the ABMA.

This study examines the crucial period of war-time China, when the delivery of health care was under severe strain. Many archival sources in English, Chinese and French were used in preparation of this study. The 103-page study includes the preface Out of Chaos, endnotes, photographs, reference map of China, and glossary.

Institutions or individuals wishing to obtain a copy gratis are invited to contact Dr. Ronald Suleski, Director of the Rosenberg Center at rsuleski@suffolk.edu. If using regular mail you may write to Dr. Ronald Suleski, Rosenberg Institute for East Asian Studies, 41 Temple Street, Dean’s Office, Boston, MA 02114.