Dillweed's Revenge: A Deadly Dose of Magic

Lauren Bangerter

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/cbmr

BYU ScholarsArchive Citation

Bangerter, Lauren (2010) "Dillweed's Revenge: A Deadly Dose of Magic," Children's Book and Media Review: Vol. 31 : Iss. 3 , Article 11. Available at: https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/cbmr/vol31/iss3/11

This Book Review is brought to you for free and open access by the All Journals at BYU ScholarsArchive. It has been accepted for inclusion in Children's Book and Media Review by an authorized editor of BYU ScholarsArchive. For more information, please contact scholarsarchive@byu.edu, ellen amatangelo@byu.edu.

Reviewer: Lauren Bangerter
Reading level: Primary, Intermediate
Rating: Cannot recommend
Genre: Informative; Occult fiction;
Subject: Revenge--Juvenile fiction; Books--Reviews;

Dillweed wants to go on adventures, but his parents do not take him, and the maid and butler who are left in charge in their absence make Dillweed do all the work. Dillweed works hard and doesn’t complain, but once the maid tries to get rid of Skorped, Dillweed has had enough. He uses magic and demons to get rid of the maid and butler. When Dillweed’s parents return home he uses the same means to get rid of them.

Heide’s commentary on revenge is told in simple sentences. Because of the simple language, much of the story is conveyed through the illustrations. Ellis has used pen ink and gouache to depict the demonic action of this story, which, combined with the simple prose, make the book more than disturbing. This book of how a child wrecks revenge on all his parental guardians is not to be recommended.

Volume 31, no. 3 (January/February 2011)