CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

The Book of Mormon was published over one hundred years ago. In the meantime, many articles have been written and many discourses have been published, both for and against this volume. In reflecting upon this matter the following questions arose in the mind of the author: Have the writers and speakers been concerned about the same materials, have they treated the same themes, as the years have passed? To ascertain whether or not there has been a shift in emphasis, the following investigation was undertaken.

To facilitate this study the time was divided into two periods, namely, an earlier period, 1830 to 1855, and a later period, 1915 to 1940.

In the preliminary survey of the newspapers and periodical literature concerned with the Book of Mormon, it was discovered that a great amount of material had been recorded. The ideas, however, in the material had never been collected and compared, one period with another.

The value of such a study appears to be significant. It is proposed in this study to examine the published materials as they appear in certain publications of these periods, especially those sponsored by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, classify that which is presented under appropriate headings, and to present the data in a convenient form for examination. At least it would reveal what topics the speaking and writing had been discussing and the emphasis that had been placed upon the topics under discussion. A comparison of the number of discussions in the one period with that of the other will tend to show certain shifts, if any, in the trend of the thinking of the authors.

In searching for these data, it was first necessary to find a basis upon which such investigations could lead to valid generalizations and conclusions concerning the shifts, if any, in points of emphasis. In determining upon these bases a preliminary investigation was conducted to determine the amount and type of literature that was available in the two periods under investigation.

The abundance of source material available during these two periods made it necessary to make a selection. The publications chosen were those sponsored by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. These contained many papers and recorded speeches of the speakers and writers who addressed themselves to the Book of Mormon theme during the periods under investigation.
Available and prolific sources were minutely examined and the data tabulated, as has been indicated. After this was done, the data were carefully evaluated and classified for the purposes of this investigation.

The printed materials about the Book of Mormon have, for the most part, been collected and bound with other articles. The Book of Mormon articles were located, listed and analyzed. No attempt was made to analyze all that was recorded during the years under investigation. Materials published in the so-called "Anti-Mormon" literature were not included in this study. The author feels, however, that an adequate amount of source material was examined and sufficient data collected to elucidate the problem under investigation. That almost a complete list of topics discussed has been secured is shown by the fact that continued examination of the literature necessitated the addition of no new headings. The sources examined were as follows:

The Millennial Star, 1840 to 1855 and 1915 to 1939
Deseret News, 1850 to 1855 and 1930 to 1940
The Seer, 1852 to 1854
Times and Seasons, 1839 to 1845
Evening and Morning Star, 1832 to 1833
Conference Reports, 1915 to 1940

The reasons for choosing these publications as sources of data for this investigation are as follows:
1. The newspapers and periodicals published during the first period contain a larger number of published oral and written discourses pertaining to the Book of Mormon.

2. All sources chosen were readily available.

3. The sources used in the second period represented a good cross-section of the oral and written discourses dealing with the Book of Mormon that were published during the period, because:

   (a) Conference Reports contain many of the discourses of the Church leaders. These speakers often dealt with Book of Mormon themes.

   (b) The Millennial Star published the oral and written discourses of those who were concerned with the distribution and teaching of the Book of Mormon, namely, the missionaries and members of the Church in Great Britain and other places.

   (c) The Deseret News published many addresses, non-Mormon papers and discourses, scientific and scholarly articles on the Book of Mormon.
CHAPTER II

PRESENTATION OF DATA

After a careful analysis was made of 1,950 articles from the sources listed on page 3, which contain oral and written discourses about the Book of Mormon, a large quantity of data was obtained. In order to reduce these data to a numerical basis, it was necessary to arrive at a scheme of classification and listing. Having determined upon this scheme, the data were then listed under the following headings: (see Table 1)

Animals: Under this heading were included references pertaining to the animals mentioned in the Book of Mormon.

Anthropology: All reference to materials that treat of the distribution, environmental and social relations, and the culture of the Book of Mormon peoples were included in this heading.

Archeology: Under this heading are included references pertaining to the remains of ancient buildings, excavations, steel, pottery, tools, building materials, art, and antiquities.

As an History: Under this heading are included Book of Mormon references that deal with origin and history of the Indian.
Authorship: All references pertaining to the writers mentioned in the Book of Mormon are listed under this heading.

Bibical Corroboration: References to the Book of Mormon teaching which are in harmony with the Bible and its teachings are in the teachings found in this volume which corroborate the Biblical teachings are listed under this heading.

Braille: Under this heading were included references to articles on the publication of the Book of Mormon in Braille.

Content: All references to the narrative, words and phrases, and all material contained in the pages of the Book of Mormon with the exception of doctrine are included under this heading.

Copied from Other Sources: Under this heading will be found references to the Book of Mormon which have had all, or part of its contents copied from other sources such as, for example, the Spaulding Manuscript.

Copyright: References concerning the copyright to the Book of Mormon are shown herein.

Doctrine: All references to the teachings and doctrine contained in the Book of Mormon are grouped together under this heading.
Distribution: In this grouping are found all references to devices employed in the distribution of the Book of Mormon.

Divine Authenticity: All references to the discussions that treat of the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon are listed under this heading.

Evidence of Truthfulness From Literature: This heading includes all references to contemporaneous literature which support the authenticity of the Book of Mormon.

Geography: The list of references dealing with Book of Mormon geography constitute this group.

Mere Mention: All references to the Book of Mormon that are so meager in content and of such a miscellaneous nature that the material could not otherwise be classified are included under this heading.

Miscellaneous Criticism: Under this heading are included references that slander and maliciously attack the Book of Mormon and that are of such a nature that they cannot otherwise be classified.

Origin: All listings under this heading pertain to the coming forth, and incidents connected with the translation of the Book of Mormon from the Gold Plates.

Origin of Nickname-Mormon: All references dealing with the origin of the nickname "Mormon" which is given to the members belonging to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints are included under this heading.

Personalities of: All references to the individual characters or personalities mentioned in the Book of Mormon are placed in this classification.

Pictorial Illustrations: Under this heading are included references to pictorial illustrations of Book of Mormon personalities and incidents that have been depicted in paintings and pictures.

Plates: Under this caption are included discussions about the Gold Plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated.

Printing: Such discussions as pertain to the setting up of the type, incidents connected therewith, and the actual printing of the different editions of the Book of Mormon with the exception of the Braille edition, are listed under this heading.

Prophecies: All references that dealt with Book of Mormon prophecies and their fulfillment are listed under this heading.

Publication: Under this heading are included those references that stated the Book of Mormon was published in the English, or other languages, also all references to existing rare editions.

Purposes Served: All references to the influence of the Book of Mormon on the spiritual welfare of the people, or the effects that it has or has had in the lives of those who read it are herein listed.

Reference to Discourses Concerning: Articles which referred to individuals who engaged in public discourse about the Book of Mormon are included under this heading.

Sale Of: All references to price or numbers of copies of the Book of Mormon sold are listed under this heading.

Study Of: The references under this heading pertain to those articles which affirm that some individual is reading or studying the Book of Mormon.

Style: The references under this heading pertain to the articles that treat the distinctive or characteristic style in which the Book of Mormon was written.

Teaching Of: References to the various types of methods employed in the teaching of the Book of Mormon, such as outlines, music, dances, story, costumes of the Book of Mormon peoples, and phonograph records, are all listed under this heading.

Testimony and Reference to Witnesses: All references to the Witnesses of the Book of Mormon, or their testimonies are listed under this heading.

Testimony Concerning: All references to personal testimonies of those who believe in truthfulness of the Book of Mormon are classified under this heading.
Tradition: All references to traditions, customs and legends of the Book of Mormon peoples with their descendants are listed under this heading.

Translation: All references under this heading have to do with those articles which refer to the translation of the Book of Mormon from the Golden Plates, and into the various languages.

Truthfulness Revealed: All references under this heading pertain to the ways and means by which the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon is revealed.

Writings About: References to all the writings about the Book of Mormon and its content are noted under this heading.

In order to obtain a more comprehensive view of what has been said about the Book of Mormon during the two periods included in this study, the following table, (Table I) is presented. These sources yielded 1,950 articles, the contents of which are classified and listed as follows, in Table I.

The contents of Table I emphasize the following points:

1. That in the first periods there are 213 references to the Book of Mormon classified under 23 headings.

2. That in the second period there are 3,160 references to the Book of Mormon that are classified under 37 headings.

3. The speakers and writers of the Book of Mormon themes emphasized a wide variety of topics in their discussions. What they discussed was classified under 37 headings already explained.

4. Discussions concerning the Book of Mormon are contained in all the publications examined.

5. During the second period all first period topics were discussed. In addition to the first period topics discussed, during the second period, there were 14 other topics considered by the speakers and writers.

6. The first period sources show that although there are 213 references to Book of Mormon papers, the references are distributed over only 23 topics.

7. The data from the table show that the second period sources yielded more material about the Book of Mormon than is gathered from the Church publications during the first period.

8. There are several topics in each period which received major emphasis.

9. There is an apparent shift in emphasis as the numbers of discussion of certain Book of Mormon themes considered in the first period are compared with those of the second period.

10. Through an analysis of Table I it may be seen that although the table does not reveal any controversial views, there are many topics discussed in which there are wide differences in point of view in the minds of the speakers and writers. 2

Table II shows the topics emphasized in each period arranged in order of frequency of treatment. Out of the ten topics receiving the greatest emphasis, each period has eight in common that appear among the first ten topics. There are two topics, namely "Archeology" and "Biblical Corroboration," that appear among the first ten topics of the first period that do not appear among the first ten topics of the second period. Each of these topics appears among the next section of ten topics that are listed in the second period.

There are likewise two topics, testimony and reference to witnesses and plates, which appear among the first ten topics of the second period that do not appear among the first ten of the first period. These two topics, however, appear among the next group of ten topics listed, in the second period.

These facts show that, although there is a slight difference in the placement of topics in their order of frequency, the speakers and writers in each period stressed the same twenty leading topics. The exception to this statement are topics that are listed as "Distribution" and "Study of," which appear among the twenty most commonly discussed topics of the second period, but are not mentioned in the first period.

Table II also shows that all topics emphasized in the first period are emphasized in the second period. There is also a number of topics emphasized during the second period that are not mentioned in the first period. The following table (Table III) emphasizes this point.

This table shows that there are 14 topics referred to in the second period that are not mentioned in the first period. With the exception of the headings entitled, "Distribution," and "Teaching of," the topics, although new to Book of Mormon discussion, have been referred to but a few times in the second twenty-five year period. There is 9.13 per cent of the speakers in the second period that discussed topics not mentioned during the first period. The amount of references, reduced to percentage, in the two periods is shown in Table IV.

This table (Table IV) emphasizes the following points:

1. That little attention has been given to the topics of Animals and Anthropology in the last period and none in the first period.

2. That Archeology was stressed by the speakers and writers of the first period, as a proof of the authenticity of the Book of Mormon; but the shift, in the second period, has been away from the external evidences, toward the Book of Mormon as an evidence of its own authenticity.

3. That there is now, as in the first period, still about 5 per cent of the discourses devoted to the idea that the origin and early history of the Indian is contained in the Book of Mormon. There is a slight decrease of emphasis in the latter period on this topic.

4. That little attention has been devoted to the various writers of the Book of Mormon.

5. That in the earlier period the speakers and writers emphasized the fact that the Book of Mormon did not take the place of the Bible, but only supplemented it. During the second period there has been a decrease in emphasis upon this topic, to only about 2 per cent of total reference.

6. That the printing of the Book of Mormon in Braille, during this last period, has received but little attention (one-third of one per cent.)

7. That the content and the doctrine of the Book of Mormon was an important matter in both the first and second period. Eighteen and two-tenths per cent of all that was said about the Book of Mormon during the first period was devoted to these two topics; in the second period 26.5 per cent of the references was to doctrine and content. There has been an increase of more than 8 per cent of the total reference in emphasis, upon these two topics in the latter period as compared with the former.

8. That the Spaulding story is no longer being considered, to any great extent, as a substitute theory of the origin of the Book of Mormon.

9. That the reference to the Book of Mormon's copyright was never mentioned, in the sources examined, during the first period, and has received in the second period, less emphasis than any of the other 37 topics.

10. That the topic of Distribution was considered of little importance in the first period. In the second period, however, the importance of this topic becomes evident.

11. That the topic of the Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon was referred to in about the same proportion in each period.

12. That there are no references to contemporaneous literature as an evidence of the authenticity of the Book of Mormon, during the first period. In the second period some attention was given to the topic, but not enough to bring it into prominence.

13. That judging from the per cent of reference to the geography of the Book of Mormon, the authors consider this phase of minor importance.
14. That during the first period over 10 per cent of the references to the Book of Mormon was of such a meagre nature that the references had to be classified under the heading of "Mere Mention." Although "Mere Mention" occupies fifth place in the list of topics in the second period the fact that the per cent of reference in the first period is almost double the per cent in the second period is an evidence that the speakers in later years are disposed to treat the topics proposed for discussion more thoroughly.

15. That the writers and speakers of both periods were concerned comparatively little with the criticism against the Book of Mormon. There was less concern about this matter during the second period than during the first.

16. That the number of references to the origin of the Book of Mormon is about constant during the two periods.

17. That there is evidence from the literature examined, that nothing was said about the origin of the nickname of Mormon during the first period. During the second period, however, there was some attention given to this topic.

18. That there was but little said about the personalities contained in the Book of Mormon during the first period. There was, however, more emphasis on this topic in the second period.

19. That during the first period no reference was made to Pictorial Illustrations. During the second period discussion on this topic appeared.

20. That there has been a tendency in the second period to refer to the Gold Plates with an increase of about one per cent of total references.

21. That reference to printing and publication received considerable recognition in both periods, but that there is a tendency to discontinue emphasizing these topics, during the last twenty-five years.

22. That the prophecies in the Book of Mormon made a larger appeal in the first period than in the second period.

23. That the emphasis given to the topic "Purpose Served," is remaining constant.

24. That in neither period but slight reference was made to Book of Mormon themes by those who spoke or wrote.

25. That there is a greater tendency to emphasize the number of copies of Book of Mormon sold during the second period than during the first period.

26. That but few references were made concerning the reading and studying of the Book of Mormon.
27. That although there have been few references to the style in which the Book of Mormon has been written, more emphasis was given to this topic during the first period than was given to it during the second period.

28. That the speakers and writers were not greatly concerned with effective devices for the teaching of the Book of Mormon. During the second period, however, there is a growing tendency to stress this topic.

29. That there is a tendency to refer to the Book of Mormon witnesses and their testimony, as proof of the Book's authenticity. This is more evident during the later period than during the first.

30. That the speakers and writers of the last period do not bear their testimonies as to the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon as much as they did during the first period.

31. That there was no consideration of the topic "Tradition" in the sources examined during the first period. In the second period this topic engaged the attention of the writers and speakers but little.

32. That the speakers and writers of the first period referred but little to the "Translation of the Book of Mormon." There was a slight increase in consideration of this topic during the second period.

33. That the different ways in which we may know the Book of Mormon is true, was emphasized just about as much in one period as in the other.

34. That but little attention was given to contemporary literature concerning the Book of Mormon.

A recapitulation on this discussion will be found in the following table. (See Table V)

CHAPTER III
SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS

It has been the purpose of this study to make an analysis of the published papers and speeches concerning the Book of Mormon, during the periods from 1830 to 1855 and 1915 to 1940 to ascertain the shift in emphasis on the topics considered.

The following conclusions may be drawn from the data presented:

1. The speakers and writers of both periods emphasized the materials found in the Book of Mormon as a source of doctrine.

2. The content phase, including story and events, made a large appeal to the writers and speakers of both periods. This was especially noticeable during the latter period.

3. There is a tendency to engage in more thorough and meaningful discussions, about the Book of Mormon in the latter period than in the former, but, in both periods there is a tendency on the part of many speakers and writers to merely mention the Book of Mormon without entering into a meaningful discussion.

4. In both periods the writers and speakers dealing with the Book of Mormon were concerned mainly with relatively few topics. Their treatment of these topics revealed a marked similarity.

5. The writers and speakers did not make as frequent reference to the prophecies of the Book of Mormon in the latter period as during the former period.

6. The facts concerning the archeological remains as collateral evidence of the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon engaged the attention of the writers and speakers less during the second period than during the first.

7. Speakers and writers gave but little attention to the importance of a study of the Book of Mormon.

8. Judging from the number of reference to such topics as Animals mentioned in the Book of Mormon, Anthropology, Authorship, Braille, Copied From Other Sources, Copyright, Evidence of truthfulness from Literature, Geography, Miscellaneous Criticism and Tradition, were of very minor importance. All save one of these, namely, Miscellaneous Criticism, were included only in the latter period.

9. The style in which the Book of Mormon was written, engaged the attention of the speakers and writers in both periods. More attention, however, was given to the topic during the first period than during the second period.
10. Judging from the frequency of reference in the literature, the sale and distribution of the Book of Mormon did not receive major emphasis, especially in the first period. In the second period, however, especially in those sources published in the mission fields, both of these topics received considerable emphasis.
